4 Per Cent Beer? Hardly
How to Fight Depression

By Arthur Brisbane

MRS. JULIA MAUDE LOWTHER, 23 years old, continued chewing gum "methodically," while the jury's verdict condemning her to death in the electric chair was read. She killed Mrs. Clara Smith, 28 years old, mother of two children. Mrs. Smith's husband, whom Mrs. Lowther obliged by killing his wife, is in jail awaiting execution.

Mrs. Lowther, black-haired, of Indian ancestry, is not especially interested in her coming execution.

The state of Ohio ought to be interested. No woman has ever before been sentenced to death in that state. It seems late in the history of the human race to set the example of killing.

Other Ohio news today tells of the crash of a meteor, a heavy mass presumably made of iron and nickel, coming from outside space, to bury itself in the ground on Henry Pohlman's farm, half a mile north of Malinta.

Thousands were awakened by the shock, windows were broken, telephone poles and wires knocked down, small trees thrown over, and a field of oats crushed to the ground.

The meteorite, if it was a meteorite, has not yet been excavated.

Those are interesting visitors that strike our atmosphere traveling several miles a second, their outer surface heated red hot by friction, and their speed slowing down as they near the earth.

Some meteorites have been worshipped by pagans, who assumed that an angry god had thrown them, as a message. The famous black Kaaba stone in Mecca, from which Mohammed rode up to Heaven on his white horse, is now known to be a meteorite.

In Australia and South America, some native tribes, according to an eminent English anthropologist, Sir James George Frazee, have one language for the men, another for the women. In those tribes, young boys speak the language of the women, their fathers speak the men's language.

This practice is attributed to kidnaping, men stealing wives from other tribes, avoid inbreeding, and the kidnaped wives keeping their own language, while the husbands kept theirs.

In some cases, that might contribute to family peace.

A rumor, as false, perhaps, as it is mysterious, says the government has issued a questionnaire, to ascertain public feeling concerning "4 per cent beer."

Brewers are asked to tell how many men 4 per cent beer would employ, at what wages, how much grain they would use if 4 per cent beer were made legal.

There is no doubt that with 4 per cent beer the government's income would be increased by more than a billion, which would take care of the deficit. It is also certain that many that now get drunk on bootleg liquor, or "needled beer," fortified with bad alcohol, would remain sober.

However, prohibition doesn't want 4 per cent beer, and prohibition will rule the administration, at least until after November, 1932.

Merchants of New York, Chicago, Seattle and elsewhere have proved that the best weapon against depression is intelligent advertising.

Goods are cheaper, get them, sell them at low prices, let people know you have them, and business will improve.

Mr. Jesse I. Straus, one of the ablest New York merchants, following a very able and energetic advertising campaign, based on goods and prices, announces an increase NOW of 42 per cent in the number of sales. And, what is more important, the fact that it became necessary to hire more than 800 additional employes to take care of the demand created by good advertising.

There is little good to have what the people want, unless you let the people know that you have it. Dr. Straus and his two younger brothers, Percy and Herbert, understand that.

The British sent a commission to investigate "slave labor" in Russian lumber camps. William Leach, Labor member of the House of Commons, asks the British government why it doesn't send a commission to investigate slave labor in some southern American lumber camps, "where contractors rent convicts for $29 a month, or to Sweden, where those that conscientiously object to military service are sent to cut timber." It is easy to see the mote in your Russian neighbor's eye.

"Behind Germany stands Russia, in a program not of cooperation, but of destruction," is the warning of A. B. Hough-

CURLEY SAYS ITALY NEAR PEACE

Europe in a Bad Way, Mayor Declares in a Radio Interview; Lots of Good Liquor

EXCLUSIVE!

By JOHN T. LAMBERT
(By Ship-to-Shore Radio Telephone from the Leviathan to Boston American Editorial Room.)

Europe is engaged in a ferocious struggle for existence.

America cannot hope to develop business with Europe for 25 years.

The trade hope of the United States is in Latin-America and the Orient.

Kings are a side show in Europe today.

Trouble in Italy between the Church and State, it is felt over there, will iron itself out.

The American mayors touring Europe deserved all the ridicule that was heaped upon them.

I found the liquor supply excellent, the supply almost as plentiful as in America.

These observations were made today by Mayor James M. Curley in a striking interview aboard the liner Leviathan, coming up New York harbor on his return from a four weeks' tour of Ireland, England, France and Italy.

HAS PART PROGRAM

He was buoyant in health and radiated happiness as he announced a program for development of the port of Boston, which he will tackle when he arrives at City Hall tomorrow morning.

The other members of the Mayor's party, Miss Mary Curley, his daughter, and Miss Loretta Bremner of Chicago, and City Treasurer Edmund Dolan, all declared they had "a perfectly marvelous trip."

The Leviathan docked in New York this afternoon and Mayor Curley and his party expected to catch the Yankee Clipper and arrive at the Back Bay station tonight.

"President Heineker of the North German Lloyd," said the Mayor in the interview, "is very seriously considering the Bremen and the Europa to establish four-day sailings from Boston."

BELT LINE RAILROAD

"In Italy I discussed the Boston port problem with the Italian line officials. There is a reasonable prospect that they, too, will establish regular sailings from Boston. Once they do it, all other lines will adopt their program.

"You never can realize how fortunately Boston is situated until you visit the European ports. We are the only port that has direct transfer from ship to shore. I want to state the city and the railroads should agree

DOCTOR SAYS VERNA WAS 'THROTTLED'

State Insists on Strangulation Theory; Hathaway Is Calm in Court

By WIN BROOKS
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Newport, R. I., June 11—Elliott R. Hathaway's defence today attacked the State's claim that his hand, at Verna E. Russell's throat, strangled her in from one to three minutes.

For an hour today, fourth day of the trial of the Fall River playboy accused of the murder of his pretty nursegirl friend, Dr. Charles H. Bryant, medical examiner of the district, was under fire of cross-examination regarding a piece of tooth found lodged in membranes of the victim's throat.

He was particularly questioned as to whether the presence of this tooth a few minutes before death might not have caused "a lot of coughing and gagging to get it out—something in the nature of choking."

Dr. Bryant, who found the tooth fragment following exhumation of the body, maintained in the face of persistent questioning that even if it had been in the throat before death, it would have been only an irritant and would not have interfered with entrance of air into the larynx.

Dr. Bryant said he could con-

CREMATION OF FAITHFULL GIRL'S BODY HALTED

Surprise Order Arrives From District Attorney Probing Slaying of Beauty

BULLETIN

Middleville, N. Y., June 11—As the doors of the Fresh Pond crematorium opened today to receive the body of Starr Wyman Faithfull, the cremation of the slain girl was halted by an order from Dist.-Atty. Elvin N. Edwards of Nassau county.

No explanation of the order accompanied the district-attorney's surprise move.

Secrets of beautiful Starr Faithfull's trysts with Boston men have been ripped from her perfumed diary discovered in New York after it was believed to have been destroyed, it was disclosed today.

But two pages have been torn from the diary of the beauty whose scantily-clad body was found on the lonely sands of Long Beach, L. I., following her participation in several "whoopee parties" aboard liners in New York, attended by prominent Boston men, it was also revealed.

According to District Attorney Elvin H. Edwards of Nassau

More News of Tragedy on Pages 2, 10, 11

County, who hurriedly summoned the dead girl's sister, Elizabeth Tucker Faithfull, to his office in Mineola today, the diary is 33 pages long and is "momentarily growing in importance."

Elizabeth, also a beauty, is understood to have been summoned to explain remarks she is declared to have made regarding trips, or a trip of herself and her stepfather, Stanley Faithfull, to Boston last week from New York, especially a trip she is said to have made last Friday, the night her sister vanished.

Search for the slayer of the beautiful Starr was joined in today by her father, Frank W. Wyman, II of Boston, who was reconciled to his wife, now Mrs. Faithfull, as a result of the daughter's tragic end.

Wyman declared positively today in New York that pretty Starr was murdered.

Discovery of Starr's diary, it is understood, bares in minute detail the record of an amazing Jekyll-and-Hyde love life, and casts a shadow of suspicion on men in the celve of no other agency of death than a hand at the throat.

MARKS ON THROAT OF SLAIN NURSE DESCRIBED IN COURT

NURSE STRANGLED

In his opinion, the throat hemorrhages found indicated that pressure had been applied steadily for one, two or three minutes.

Testimony, grim and highly technical, fell on a taut silence in the crowded courtroom.

The medical examiner several times demonstrated points of his answers. Once he cleared his throat, raspingly, to show how a person might seek to expel an irritant such as the tooth would have been if it was in the throat while the girl was still alive.

Outside the courthouse a huge crowd of men and women, kept in single file by police, awaited a chance to hear the evidence.

MOTHER AT SIDE

Inside the courtroom testimony at times of an intimate nature, at times highly involved, at all times grim, was heard alike, unflinchingly by the calm defendant and the father of the girl he is alleged to have slain.

Hathaway's entire family again was present, one seat removed from the victim's father, Carl E. Russell of Portsmouth.

For ten minutes during the noon recess, Hathaway's mother, her arm half-way around him, visited the defendant, while his father, Representative Hathaway, and his brothers, Alden and Dr. Louis, left the courtroom.

Among the spectators was Mrs. Charles A. Walsh, wife of the presiding justice. She was accompanied by a woman friend.

Dr. George Burgess Magrath, famous Boston pathologist; Dr. Emmus D. Feasley, Dr. Lester A. Rounds and Dr. James Holt comprised the government's battery of experts seated in front of a spare jury box awaiting turns on the stand.

With George Hurley and John Nolan, defense counsel, sat the defense trio to be called in opposition, Dr. Francis McCarthy, former assistant medical examiner at Boston; Dr. James Hamilton of Providence and Prof. E. K. Strachan of Brown University.

CROWD AT COURT

Verlon V. Galvin of Fall River, Hathaway's friend and state witness, was in the courthouse but not in the room.

Glancing through the courtroom doors he had his first sight of Hathaway since he claims they parted on the night of the murder, the night the defendant drove him to the death spot and showed him the body.

He was accompanied by his wife and mother, who will be witnesses, too, and by his own attorney, Philip Goldberg of Providence, who was allowed in court.

A large crowd followed him from the courthouse at noon as he fled from a dozen newspaper photographers. A larger crowd remained outside the entrance for the entire recess in the hope of being admitted when the trial resumed.

There were several tilts between Atty.-Gen. McLyman and defence counsel during the questioning of Dr. Bryant. The jury's interest on the medical testimony never wavered even when it became purely technical.

At the opening of the morning session Dr. Bryant was recalled to the witness stand. Questioned by McLyman:

Q.—In your examination of the body did you find any evidence that other causes contributed to the death? A.—No, there was only one cause, asphyxiation by strangulation.

Q.—Will you state whether the discolored areas on the neck were at a vulnerable point or not? A.—Yes, a vulnerable part.

Q.—By examination of the tiny hemorrhages in the membrane and their quantity, could you tell the time consumed in the production of these symptoms? A.—The time would vary and would depend wholly on the amount of pressure exerted and the condition of patient upon whom inflicted. I think probably about one, two or three minutes of continued pressure death would result.

Q.—When you found the fragment of the tooth, after exhumation, who else was present? A.—Dr. Feasley.

Q.—Anyone else? A.—Dr. Magrath was in the undertaking room with Dr. Rounds.

MARKS ON THROAT

(McLyman reviewed yesterday's testimony as to the finding of the tooth fragment near the larynx of the dead girl after her body had been exhumed and taken to Newport for a second examination.)

Q.—Was the fragment in such a place as to cause any trouble with breathing? A.—No.

Q.—Did you remove the pearl beads from Miss Russell's neck? A.—Yes.

Q.—What did you see relative to the location of the beads on her neck?

Atty. Hurley objected, on the ground that removal of the beads by the medical examiner took place after the body had been removed from the lane.

Q.—Well, what did you see as to location when you removed them? A.—They were quite low down—near the collarbone. There were a number of indentations on the throat where the beads rested. There were no marks inside—just indentation.

Q.—(McLyman showing the witness a photo)—Did you notice the discoloration of the chin which is shown here? A.—Yes, it was apparently saliva, faintly darkened with blood.

Q.—Did you see the girl's father in the lane that morning? A.—Yes, he came some time after I arrived.

Q.—Did he identify the body? A.—Yes, he did, as that of his daughter.

Q.—What in your opinion made these marks on the neck? A.—A hand. I could perceive of no other object making such marks.

(Recess)

Outside in the corridor of the courtroom Asst. Atty.-Gen. Fischer conferred with Vernon V. Galvin, former school chum of the defendant, now the principal government witness in the case against Hathaway. With Galvin were his attractive 21-year-old wife, Laura, and his mother, Representative Louis E. Hathaway and Mrs. Hathaway were again in the courtroom today. They were absent yesterday. Alden, twin brother of the defendant, was seated only one chair away from Carl E. Russell, father of the slain girl, who has been in daily attendance with his counsel.

CROSS-EXAMINED

Cross-examination of Dr. Bryant by Hurley:

Q.—There were two autopsies, were there not? A.—I wouldn't say two autopsies.

Q.—How would you express it? A.—The body was examined twice.

Q.—The first was March 24 and the second April 27? A.—Yes.

Q.—And at this second one, there was a considerable examination of the body, was there not? A.—I wouldn't say considerable. There was an examination.

Q.—How long were you and the others at that work. A.—Well considerable of that time was consumed not by the examination, but by the taking of photographs by Dr. Rounds of the bone board and by examination of the dental work which was necessary.

Q.—At the second autopsy, was it the first time that anyone had seen the piece of tooth you told us was in the throat? A.—Yes.

Q.—How large was this tooth? A.—It was a small piece.

Q.—How long did it take to perform the second autopsy? A.—Well, it might have been two hours.

Q.—In that time, tell us what you and the others did. A.—Well, there was the examination of the mouth by Dr. Holt, which consumed considerable time.

Q.—Well, what was done first? A.—They took pictures.

NEW BRUISE BARED

Q.—Did you note any additional bruises on the body other than those you saw at the first examination? A.—Yes, there was an additional bruise on the jaw.

Q.—Was it a post-mortem or ante-mortem bruise? A.—Ante-mortem bruise.

Q.—Anything else? A.—Yes, there was an excoriation of the skin on the right side of the neck.

Q.—Were there two spots? A.—No, only one spot.

Q.—What did you do after the photographs were taken? A.—Dr. Holt looked at the bridgework, examined the teeth and the mouth.

Q.—What next? A.—Dr. Rounds did some work. He took some contents of the fingernails.

Q.—By the way, doctor, how were the fingernails at the first autopsy? A.—Well manicured.

A.—In good condition? A.—They seemed to be.

Q.—Was the polish still showing on them? A.—I wouldn't say that.

Q.—Getting back to the second autopsy, what else took place? A.—Fingerprints were taken by Mr. Applin.

Q.—Did Dr. Magrath do anything? A.—No, at that time he observed the proceedings, and after that we went into the medical facts in connection with Dr. Magrath's examination of the whole body.

Q.—Was the whole body there? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was the stomach there? A.—Yes.

Q.—Well, wasn't the stomach taken out? A.—No, not the stomach, the contents of the stomach.

Q.—Were the intestines there? A.—Yes, all the organs were there.

Q.—And the brain? A.—No, the whole brain and cord were taken out.

NECK EXAMINED

Q.—Getting back to the second view, April 27, was there an examination of the whole body by Dr. Magrath? A.—Yes, I was present.

Q.—Was there a further examination of the neck? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was there a further examination of the inside of the neck? A.—There was.

A 10-minute recess was taken at this point.

Atty. Hurley proceeded to question Dr. Bryant in a technical manner about the various membrances, veins, and bones in the neck. In response to a question propounded by Hurley, relative to strangulation by a human hand, Dr. Bryant said that in his experience this was the first case he had ever seen where strangulation was caused by a hand.

In the questioning by Hurley, which drew several objections from McLyman, and Asst. Atty.-Gen. John Day, the court permitted the doctor to describe the various hemorrhages which took place in the throat of Verna Russell.

The doctor said that by the use of force the vessels became ruptured, which caused darkening to appear on the skin. Hurley in his questioning endeavored to show that the small piece of tooth which was found at the second view was in a position to cause gagging and choking and obstructing entrance of air to the lungs, but Dr. Bryant said that while the position of the piece of tooth would cause some irritation he could not say how much gagging and choking it would cause, but that in any event it would not in any way interrupt the entrance of air to the lungs.

Hurley took the small piece of tooth and showed it to the doctor, and the doctor identified it as the tooth taken from the throat of Miss Russell.

IDENTIFIES TOOTH

After Hurley had failed in his attempt to show that the piece of tooth would interfere with air entering the lungs, he proceeded to question the doctor as to the position the body lay in when found, and the position of the clothing, and endeavored to draw from the doctor an opinion as to how, from the position of the clothing and the body, the body was carried there. There was an objection by McLyman, and the court ruled that the doctor was not qualified to tell how the body was carried or placed from the position of the body and clothing when found. This ended the morning session.

Hurley later continued his cross-examination of Dr. Bryant.

Q.—Was the piece of artificial tooth found April 27 back of the tonsil? A.—Yes. It was back of the tonsil tissue.

Q.—If you were going to place your finger to get to it, you would have to pass by the tonsils, wouldn't you? A.—Yes, you'd pass by and down below to the side of the tonsil.

CLOTHING NOT TORN

Q.—Would you say beyon or below the tonsil? A.—I wouldn't say beyond.

Q.—You found no piece of Verna Russell's clothing torn? A.—I did not.

Q.—And you examined all her clothing? A.—I did.

Q.—How much did Miss Russell weigh? A.—About 140 pounds.

Q.—How tall was the girl? A.—Five foot, four inches.

Q.—Were her ears highly cleaned? A.—Yes.

Q.—No sign of blood or injuries to the ears? A.—None.

Q.—And the eyes were not protruding when you first saw the girl? A.—They were not protruding.

Q.—And the tongue was not protruding? A.—Not protruding.

Q.—And the gums above the teeth, were they injured in any way? A.—The gum above the right incisor was quite red. There were no tears in the tissue.

Q.—And the abrasions on the right thigh, you said came after the girl had died? A.—Yes, they were post-mortem abrasions.

Q.—Caused by the stone she was lying against? A.—It appears so.

Court then adjourned until 2 o'clock.

Dr. Bryant resumed the witness stand after the noon recess for cross-examination by Hurley.

Q.—Did you observe the ground about the body? A.—Yes.

NO SIGN OF STRUGGLE

Q.—Was there any sign of a struggle? A.—To me, none.

Q.—You looked at the neck of Miss Russell as the body lay dead? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you see black and blue spots? A.—I did.

Q.—Some persons bruise more easily than other, don't they, doctor? A.—No. It depends only on the amount of pressure used.

Hurley carried a photograph to the front of the jury box. Dr. Bryant stepped down from the witness stand. Judge Walsh left the bench and McLyman joined the group in front of the jury box. The picture was one taken of the body at the autopsy. Pointing to certain marks on the throat of the girl as shown in the picture, Hurley asked.

Q.—Was this mark on the throat at the autopsy? A.—No.

Q.—Do you know how it came there? A.—It is a burn, probably through the use of embalming fluid.

Q.—This mark is much larger than than the one on the throat when you examined it at the autopsy?

McLyman objected on the ground that it had already been testified that the pictures were enlargements.

Court: "These pictures are enlargements, meaning they were increased in size. Sustained."

Hurley: But increased how much, your honor?

Walsh: I'm not answering questions. Objection sustained. Exception saved.

Hurley: I would ask the court to have marked for identification on these photographs the marks caused by embalming fluid.

McLyman: I object to that. We'd have something then on the photograph which the photographer didn't take.

Walsh: That is quite right. Motion denied. Exception saved.

Q (Hurley)—Doctor, you found the single mark on the left side of the throat at the angle of the jaw? A.—Yes.

Q.—How was the mark made, in your opinion? A.—By pressure, or a blow.

Hurley then stepped to the bench with the photograph, and said:

DEATH RE-ENACTED

"Your Honor, I ask to have this exhibit withdrawn on the ground that some marks shown on it were not on the body at the time of the autopsy."

The motion was denied by Judge Walsh and the exception of Attorney Hurley saved.

Hurley stepped Dr. Bryant to place his hand on his (Hurley's) throat demonstrating again where the marks on the slain nurse's throat were made. McLyman objected.

McLyman: "Mr. Hurley's collar is too high for a proper demonstration, your Honor."

Hurley moved his collar down, and Bryant stepped toward him.

Judge Walsh: "Can you put your hand on Mr. Hurley's throat at the proper spot, Doctor, or do you want him to take his collar off?"

Hurley questioned the witness at length regarding measurement of the marks and finally drew an objection from Asst. Atty.-Gen. Day.

U. S. REFUSES TO LET CLOWE ENTER MEXICO

Fears Are Felt for Man Taking the Bodies of Slain Mexicans Home

Oklahoma City, June 11 (INS)—Apprehension for the safety of Col. Charles Clowe, representing Oklahoma in returning the bodies of Emilio Cortes Rubio and Emanuel Gomez to their homes in Mexico homes in Mexico City, today led the State Department at Washington to advise Governor W. H. Murray not to permit Col. Clowe to enter Mexico.

This was believed due to reports of ill-feeling in Mexico over the slaying of the two youths by a deputy sheriff at Ardmore Monday.

Col. Clowe left here yesterday on a train with the bodies. Governor Murray's son, Massena Murray, also was aboard but planned to go only as far as the border.

Governor Murray said the advice from the State Department was received by telephone.

Shot "Without Warning," Mexican Consul Reports

Washington, June 11 (AP)—Consul Valdez in Oklahoma City reported to the Mexican embassy today that the two Mexican students, Emilio Cortes Rubio, kinsman of President Rubio, and Manuel Gomez were "shot without warning" by an Oklahoma deputy sheriff "fearing for his life."

Valdez, who was ordered to Oklahoma City by the consul general in San Antonio to make an investigation, sent a copy of his detailed report to Mexico City.

The report said that Rubio and Gomez after arriving in Ardmore stopped for refreshments, proceeding afterwards on their way. Five minutes after they stopped so that Salvador Corra Tobel, who accompanied the two, could get out.

Investigators say Deputy Sheriffs Guess and Crosby were traveling behind the car, and seeing Salvador Rubio standing in front of the lights of the automobile admonished the youths. The latter answered that they were students going to Mexico.

Noticing Emilio had a pistol, Crosby snatched the gun and Guess walked towards Crosby. When Guess approached the car on the right side he found Gomez standing outside the car covered with a blanket and holding a gun.

HATHAWAY AND MOTHER SMILE, CHAT IN COURT

"Playboy" Joyful for the First Time During Trial; Law Ends Recess Talk

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent.

Newport, R. I., June 11—The playboy talked with his mother today. He held counsel with her for 10 minutes during one of the recesses. And throughout the parental interview he tapped either his hand or the table with a ruler. It was his first courtroom chat with her.

Mrs. Louis E. Hathaway has visited her son at the jail daily but today was the first time she spoke to him before the gaze of spectators attending the "playboy's" trial for murder. They smiled at each other, their heads almost touched as they whispered together in a huddle.

Hathaway rested his face on his fisted right hand as he leaned closer to the grey-haired woman and he talked into her ear. A soft whisper.

TAPS ON TABLE.

Then he tapped the ruler on his hand. Audible taps. Repeated hand taps, then taps on the table. Now he looked at his mother as she talked with him. Now he gazed off into space. Now he shrugged his shoulder. Now he gesticulated with his hands. Now he took out his handkerchief and wiped perspiring hands.

Mrs. Hathaway spoke again and her son leaned forward, anxious to hear all she has to say. It was a pleasant chat. They seemed to enjoy it. The playboy seemed happier. His smiled more. He wasn't so pensive-looking.

As the jury marched into the court room, the recess ended. Mrs. Hathaway arose, returned to her seat within the bar enclosure and spoke to her husband beside her.

GEARED NOT NAPPING

The playboy turned his attention to the jury. He followed them with his eyes as they filled the box. Then he moved nearer his counsel, George Hurley. So did the law, in his seat directly back of him.

Elliott looked over his counsel's papers, had something to say by lights of the automobile admonished the youths. The latter answered that they were students going to Mexico.

Noticing Emilio had a pistol, Crosby snatched the gun and Guess walked towards Crosby. When Guess approached the car on the right side he found Gomez standing outside the car covered with a blanket and holding a gun.

Former Mayor Andrew J. Peters of Boston, named in New York newspapers as a "prominent politician" and distant relative of the dead girl in the Starr Wyman Faithfull mystery, today denied with emphasis that he had ever had any social relations with the Starr family or that in any way whatever had any connection with the affairs of the girl.

"Reports that I attended at any time any party in New York or elsewhere where Miss Faithfull was a guest are untrue," added Mr. Peters. "The girl's mother is distantly related to Mrs. Peters. Since Mrs. Wyman, mother of Starr, married Faithfull five years ago I have seen nothing of the family.

"Both Starr and her sister were fine girls so far as we know. I was in New York a month ago, but attended no such function as has been reported and did not see Miss Faithfull, or any of her family.

"Since Starr's mother divorced her first husband and remarried we have heard little of the family until this unfortunate affair."

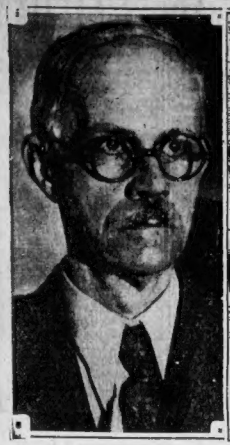

Mr. Peters was not questioned by Dist. Atty. Elvin N. Edwards of Nassau county during his hurried visit to Boston yesterday. Mr. Edwards on his return to New York announced that Mr. Peters was eliminated entirely from the investigation.

ALIMONY CLASH MAY REUNITE ELDRIDGES

Another chapter in the famous Eldridge divorce case was written in Middlesex court today when Mrs. Helen Eldridge, Newton society leader, haled Joseph I. Eldridge, Boston broker, into court for failure to pay $335 in alimony.

Mrs. Eldridge was refused a divorce last April by Judge Charles N. Harris after an interlocutory decree had been given earlier in which alimony was set.

She claimed her wealthy husband failed to pay after the divorce was refused and sought a ruling on the law.

Attorneys for Eldridge claimed that the refusal of the divorce excused Eldridge from payment. A move toward reconciliation of the couple, who have not been living together, was seen in a request of Mrs. Eldridge's counsel for a conference between the two.

Judge Harris said he would think it over until Monday, when both parties will appear again.

POISON 'DEATH PLOT' CHARGED

Concord, N. H., June 11—Charges that his wealthy father, Jonathan M. Foster, 65-year-old apple grower of Canterbury, was murdered by slow poison, have been made by Kenneth R. Foster, 30, of Canterbury, it was revealed today through cross-petitions filed in probate court.

A petition by Kenneth Foster asks that a commission be appointed to examine the stenographer, Mrs. Wealthy A. Foster, 66, for her sanity.

The second petition, by Moses A. Foster of Canterbury, natural son of the farmer's widow, asks appointment of a commission to test the sanity of Kenneth. Hearings on the cross-petitions will be held June 23 in probate court. Meanwhile, a temporary conservator of the estate has been appointed.

Foster, who prospered for years as an apple grower and who came from an old New Hampshire family, died two weeks ago in New Hampshire State Hospital.

Kenneth, one of two stepsons, went in County Solicitor Willoughby A. Colby a week ago and said he believed his father had died from poison placed in his drinking water, either in the farm well or in water after being taken from the well.

The body was exhumed and an autopsy performed, the organs being given to Dr. Charles Howard, state chemist. Dr. Howard was unable to trace any poison.

County Solicitor Colby, still unsatisfied, however, has sent the organs to Dr. George B. Magrath in Boston.

TAX RIOTS GROW IN GERMANY

Berlin, June 11 (AP)—Communist violence in four widely separated cities against the new emergency taxation decrees gave Chancellor Heinrich Bruening food for thought today.

Pavements were torn up, street lights were smashed and thoroughfares were darkened before the battle was over. Traffic was disrupted and merchants closed their shops. Many arrests were made, but no one was known to have been injured.

POPE TO DROP HIS DEMANDS

Rome, June 11 (AP)—Recession of the Vatican and the government from their uncompromising attitudes of last week appeared today to have brought the settlement of their dispute within sight.

Pope Pius XI, is understood to be willing to accept the state's regrets over attacks on Catholic property instead of demanding a formal apology, and it is believed likely the government may agree to the re-opening of Catholic youth clubs in some form.

This may prove to be under the name of "confraternities" or similar organizations which might later take on many features of the dissolved group. Such a move would be hastened by the Vatican's willingness to "purify" the clubs by the elimination of certain leaders whose political activities the government criticizes.

The state's efforts to aid the settlement were seen in the arrest yesterday of three persons charged with seeking the Priverno Cathedral, one of the incidents which the Vatican protested in its recent notes.

The danger of a diplomatic rupture or renunciation of the Lateran treaty and concordat is now believed to be extremely remote.

Aboard Submarine Nautilus at Sea, June 11—With a headwind and running sea, and one engine stopped since 6:30 o'clock yesterday morning, the Nautilus logged 200 miles between noon Tuesday and noon Wednesday.

In the previous 24 hours we had made 250 miles. Our position as this is being radioed to our shore contact station is 42.11 north latitude, 43.11 west longitude, at 8 p. m. This is approximately 1350 miles off Boston. The Nautilus sailed from Provincetown at 11 o'clock last Thursday night.

Our course is set for the Scilly Isles, off Land's End, England, where Capt. Errol Boyd and Lieut. Harry Connor landed in the airplane Columbia last year on their transatlantic flight, and we have decided definitely to call in at London.

DISASTER AVERTED

The starboard engine was stopped yesterday morning when a heavy sea, accompanied by a swell, made it inadvisable to push too heavily into it. This smacker carried away the screen in front of the bridge.

The next wave carried away the lashing on the conning tower hatch, the only hatch open.

It closed with a bang!

Fortunately, we had a ventilator open in the scientific compartment.

Had the ventilator not been open, the engines would soon have exhausted all the air in the boat and created a vacuum that might have been dangerous to the ear drums of the crew below.

HAILED BY LINER

The seas are now a little to the bow, and this rolls us more than we have rolled before. Sometimes we go over to a 35-degree angle, but the Nautilus is safe at more than 45 degrees.

At 8 o'clock this morning, the White Star liner Brittanic swung abruptly off her course to greet us. Her passengers lined the deck to stare as they went by.

We are now beyond the warm Gulf stream and have really entered the cold, gray waters of the Atlantic.

ORGAN MUSIC ON AIR WITHOUT USE OF 'MIKE'

New York, June 11 (AP)—An electrical organ in which loud speakers take the place of pipes and from which it is possible to broadcast without microphones will be heard on the air Sunday, the National Broadcasting Company has announced.

The organ is the invention of Capt Richard H Ranger of Newark, N. J., who invented a device for sending autograph messages and photographs by wireless.

The console of Capt. Ranger's organ is in his living room. Thirteen loud speakers replace the organ pipes. Amplifiers, generators and other devices are installed in a garage behind the house, all connected by wires.

The keyboard controls frequency of the alternating current used in the organ which produces the fundamental tones. A series of stops control the overtones, making it possible to duplicate the timbre of almost any instrument.

By running the wires to a transmitter, instead of the loud-speakers, radio impulses are sent out which can be picked up by distance receiving sets.

The organ has a range from 16 to 8000 cycles. It operates on 250 volts, has 150 tubes, 50,000 circuits.

The demonstration concert will be played by Charles M. Courboin, organist of the Church of the Resurrection, Rye, N. Y.

Capt. Ranger is 42 years old and attended Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Harness Sun When Coal's Gone, Says Scientist

Stanford University, Cal., June 11 (UP)—No real need to worry about exhausting the world's supply of coal and oil, according to Dr. Harris J. Ryan of Stanford University, because the sun's rays will be harnessed to supply electric energy.

This will be achieved, in the opinion of Dr. Ryan, even before the coal and oil of the earth have been used up.

"Electricity," he adds, "is not to be thought of as a source of energy in itself, but rather as the transportation element which enables mankind to use for his purposes certain existing forces."

ALIENS GET N. E. CEMENT TRADE

Washington, June 11 (AP)—American producers today pleaded before the tariff commission for retention of the six cents a hundred pounds duty on cement. Importers testified previously the rate was wrecking their business.

F. M. Coogan of Easton, Pa., vice-president of the Alpha Portland Cement Company, testified his company had given up the attempt to compete with foreign cement in Porto Rico.

James H. Ackerman, vice-president of the Lawrence Portland Cement Co. of New York, said dealers were told before 1930 they could deduct 45 cents a barrel if they found foreign competition for the job contemplated.

In 1928 he said his company was compelled to withdraw entirely from eastern Massachusetts, portions of Maine, Vermont, Connecticut and all of New York because it could not meet foreign prices.

"Before long all our dealers in the Boston area were deducting 45 cents," Ackerman testified.

TO THE BUYING PUBLIC-

Do You Know-

That Joyce Bros. & Co., Inc., is not associated with any other company doing business under any other name--is not engaged in any "entangling alliances" of any kind, but has been owned and operated under the same management for the past forty-two years and still is.

That contrary to some people's belief, the name Joyce is truly that of the president, and owners, of this organization.

Do You Know-

That this organization, founded in 1889 with but a single store, today maintains and operates ten stores in ten New England cities all doing business under our own name-Joyce Bros. & Co., Inc.

Do You Know-

That our merchandise is sanely advertised. We do not believe in offending the intelligence of our patrons with extravagant statements or unreasonable price comparisons. All our merchandise is marked at the lowest possible prices, allowing only a minimum margin of profit. This method, combined with our huge buying power, means lower prices to our patrons.

Do You Know-

That our charge account plan, widely copied, but never equalled, is the fairest and squarest means of time payment accommodation known. It may be used without extra cost.

Do You Know-

That we aim to make shopping here a pleasure in itself, aside from the attractiveness of our merchandise and the values we offer. We want you to be satisfied, not alone with what you buy, but pleased with the way it is sold.

Very truly yours,
JOYCE BROS. & CO., INC.

MAYOR TELLS OF DELICIOUS 'HAIG & HAIG'

at once on the establishment of a belt line terminal railroad on Atlantic ave., connecting the North and South sides of the port.

"We can build a terminal railroad and take down the Elevated structure at a cost of $4,000,000. There are $360,000,000 of property values along Atlantic ave., which have depreciated 50 per cent in 10 years.

NO HOPE IN EUROPE

"With this improvement, that property would double in value in less than five years and pay the entire expense of the development.

"There is very little prospect of the sale of American goods in Europe in the next 15 years. Intense nationalism saturates the people.

"In France, you can buy only French water, neither Lithia nor Poland Spring, nor Italian waters can be bought there.

"Italy buys only Italian goods in Italy, and the same policy exists everywhere. It is caused by the ferocity of the struggle for existence, and will continue so long as they are in debt unless some one of them has a successful war and wipes the others out.

"I am convinced, after four weeks in Europe, that the hope of the United States is not in Europe, but in Latin America and the Orient.

DEVELOP MISSISSIPPI

"The real hope for America is in the expenditure, at once, of $2,000,000,000 for the development of the Mississippi Valley. We can get water power, cheap electricity, cheap transportation and a direct route to Latin America—and every manufacturing industry of substance in the United States would have to establish at least one plant there and thus an inland empire would be developed.

"Holland, with 8,000,000 people, has spent $200,000,000 for development of the Zuider Zee. France has a marvelous canal system. We could take a leaf out of their books, spend 15 times what they have spent, solve unemployment—and our troubles would be over.

"There is no hope for America in Europe. We have got to help them instead of their helping us. However, Europe has made more improvements in the last 10 years for the happiness and convenience of man than in the preceding 10 centuries.

NO SLUMS IN LONDON

"There are no slums in London, except in the Edgar Wallace detective stories. The old thatched cottage which the poets wrote about and in which the humans and animals lived together are a thing of the past.

"Kings are a side show in Europe today. Every leader is seeking hard to improve the conditions of the masses, in order to allay unrest and prevent communism.

"I met the American mayor in Paris at a luncheon. The toastmaster said he had a wonderful stable to introduce—24 mares, (Naires). That was enough for me, and I quit while they were giving a merry run-around, eating, drinking and making speeches. The papers were justified in their ridicule.

In Rome you have to do as the Romans do. Common decency requires that a man shall adhere to the customs of drinking to the health of the ruler of the nation.

LIQUOR GOOD OVER THERE

"It is his duty to drink or to leave the room if he is averse to drinking. I would have drunk with pleasure.

"I found the liquor excellent, the supply almost as plentiful as in America and the price not so prohibitive.

"You can't get as good rye or bourbon in Europe as in the United States, but after one drink of their Manhattan, you do not have to ask for another.

"I found some Haig & Haig so delicious that I would like to have brought a cask of it back with me.

"The Spanish sherry is marvelous.

"The Lord Mayor of Plymouth was one of the city officials who has in a parlor adjoining the mayor's office an open cabinet with a choice selection of liquors.

HE NEVER REFUSED

"I was invited and never refused, but I could not help wondering how long the city treasury would last if every American mayor was allowed to have a private wine closet for the entertainment of distinguished guests, nor could I see why Mayor Porter complained against the custom of drinking to the health of the ruler, because more liquor is drunk in Los Angeles, per capita, than any city in the United States.

"The King of Italy told me I was not a yes-man. The one topic was work and wages. He is a kindly and lovable character, intensely interested in the welfare of his people, but I said to him, 'I don't understand why you don't go in for modern farming, with Ford tractors and the like.'

"'Oh,' the King replied, 'every bull makes work for one more man.'

TALK WITH MUSSOLINI

"Mussolini is a man of intense energy, who-se sole thought, aim and ideal is or the welfare of Italy and its people. It seems to be generated arom his face. I had 40 minutes with him and he is better informed from the standpoint of political economics than any man I met on the entire trip.

"There was a feeling that the trouble between the church and the state would iron itself out. The Pope is a character whose fidelity is beyond any possible description."

HOPE GIVEN UP FOR CREW OF SUBMARINE

London, June 11 (AP)—The British Admiralty has abandoned hope that any of the men trapped in the sunken submarine Poseidon off Weihaiwei, China, still might be alive.

The commander-in-chief of the fleet in China sent word today that there is no foundation for reports that some of the crew who went down with the ship on Tuesday still are living.

His message confirmed reports that divers sent down from H. M. S. Hermes had received no reply to messages tapped out on the submarine's hull.

Man Found Dead on New Haven Tracks

Middleboro, June 11 (AP)—Frank Kelley, 43, of Bellerose, L. I., was found dead today on the tracks of the New Haven Railroad. An automobile license bearing Kelley's name and address was found in his clothing.

Police said Kelley was a member of a circus trouple which left Middleboro by railroad yesterday for Wareham. They believe he fell from a train.

Germans to Await Stimson's Arrival

Berlin June 11 (AP)—Chancellor Bruening today received the full accord of his cabinet regarding his week-end conversations in England with Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald.

In well informed quarters it is assumed nothing definite will be undertaken on the reparations issue until Col. Henry L. Stimson, American Secretary of State, arrives.

Col. House Is Crystal Gazing

-By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER-

Colonel House says the next President of this glorious federation will be a Democrat.

The colonel will be remembered as a White House spokesman during an administration where no explanations were necessary.

He was a happy combination of patience on a monument, the three wise monkeys of Japan and Rodin's thinker. A profound scholar and one who was popularly supposed to wear his thinking cap while studying alphabetical soup.

With the colonel talking now it seems that it is all right to cut out the muffler outside the party limits.

"If the election is held next week," says the colonel, "a Democrat will be elected."

But we hold our elections in November, Colonel, just to prevent the political enemy from blaming it on the hot sun.

July is no month for politics or politicians. We're convinced that Al Smith would have done much better if he hadn't had his picture taken in a bathing suit.

Even Mr. Coolidge issues a June ultimatum that the brains of the country need a rest. As Cal made this statement in Vermont we suspect he has been talking on the long distance telephone.

Diary Tells of Boy's Struggles as He Died in Wilds

Edmonton, Alta., June 11 (AP)—The struggles of an 18-year-old English schoolboy, inexperienced in woodcraft, to save himself from the clutches of winter in the North Canadian wilderness, were revealed today in a diary found beside his body, at the end of his trail.

The body of John Noel Patch Bennett, member of a wealthy family in Oakdene, Eng., was found by Kelly Sunderman, a guide, beside Tillicum creek, after a search of seven months, and has been shipped to England.

Bennett set out alone from Grande Prairie last October with a pack horse, intending to make his way through Pine pass to Prince George, B. C., for adventure.

What is the effect of modern Ultra Violet Rays upon tobacco? Dr. E. E. Free, one of America's well-known scientists, who was retained by us to study Lucky Strike's manufacturing process, addressing the Illuminating Engineering Society, said:

"The essential effect of the Ultra Violet is the production of better tobacco and of cigarettes regarded by virtually all smokers who have tested them as milder and with a lesser tendency to cause throat irritation."

Here in America LUCKY STRIKE is the only cigarette that employs Ultra Violet Rays in connection with its exclusive "TOASTING" Process—the only cigarette that brings you the benefits of the exclusive "TOASTING" Process which expels certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos.

NOBLE IS GIVEN RIGHT TO PLAY UKE IN PRISON

Russell E. Noble intends to learn to play the banjo and ukulele to while away his leisure hours at the Charlestown State Prison, where he recently began a life sentence for the hammer slaying of Mrs. Cora E. C. Ellis of Haverhill.

This information was divulged in a letter from the youth to his brother, Charles, in Haverhill, in which he asks that these instruments be purchased for him. The letter also states he is in fine health and usual good spirits.

According to the youth's letter, he has not been assigned to regular duties, but has been watching operations in the prison repair shop and laundry.

He is greatly interested in Haverhill events and also requests that a daily paper be forwarded to him from that city.

SIGHTS AND SOUNDS

Fred Allen, Boston boy star of "Three's a Crowd" is in town visiting relatives and arranging for passport and what-not . . . He sails for a vacation in Europe on June 27 on the "Rochambeau" . . . Clifton Webb, who stars with Fred in "Three's a Crowd," went to the hospital after the show closed for the summer last Saturday night, for an operation.

It may be a little early in the season but this department wants to predict here and now that Malcolm Nichols will be a candidate for mayor of Boston . . . When Buddy Rogers played at the Met here last October he drew down $5500 for his week's work . . . If he were to come back now—and, who can tell? Anything is liable to happen in show business these days—his salary would be only $2500 . . . Such is fame.

A restaurant on Boylston st. is the first one to take up the "Eat-as-much-as-you-want-for-50c" idea locally . . . Childs is trying it out successfully in one of their New York restaurants . . . Ed Sullivan, who was switched over from the sports dept. on the N. Y. "Graphic" to write a Broadway column for the same sheet, has been standing the boys on their ears for the past week or so with the hot stuff he's been writing . . . A battery of New York newspapermen swarmed on this town yesterday in pursuit of the Beacon Hillers mixed up in the Star Faithful case . . . You'd be surprised if you knew who the prominent citizens are whose names are figuring in the secret investigation . . . Didja know that one large restaurant chain now stops the sale of ginger ale at 6 p. m. on the boys can't mix them . . . Joe Kennedy, Boston's pet financier and big shot theater man, is back at his Cape Cod home . . . Of all those mentioned, the latest "inside tip" is that Col. George W. Bunnell will land the registrar of motor vehicles job . . . Don't be surprised if Clara Bow is signed almost any day by Metro for a big comeback.

Convicted of a third offense of speeding within a year, Edwin Jankowski, 24, of Taft st., Dorchester, was fined $50 in the Newton court yesterday and was given until June 24 to pay.

EUROPE WAITS FOR U. S. TO ACT ON WAR DEBTS

London, June 11 (INS)—With both the British and French governments opposed to the calling at the present time of an international conference on war debts, political observers today considered it likely that Europe would wait for the United States to take the initiative.

"The British attitude regarding war debts is well known," Premier Ramsay MacDonald told Conservative questioner in the House of Commons, "and action on the line suggested would serve no useful purpose."

The Prime Minister let it be known that he did not desire even parliamentary discussion of the question, since debates on allied debts in the House often contain acrimonious criticism of the United States which, in turn, arouses antagonism in America.

Answering another questioner, MacDonald declared that at the proper time reparations and debt developments would be discussed.

N. E. RIVERS RISE TO NEW HIGHS

sections were put out of repair.

Huge onion fields and other farms at Turners Falls were destroyed by the flood from the Connecticut river. Flood gates were opened and flashboards removed at Vernon, Vt., where a flow of 47,000 cubic feet was reported.

At Hartford, Ct., the Connecticut was about flood stage.

At Lawrence the Merrimack river was up to 16.37 feet, a rise of 5.77 feet since yesterday. It still was rising today, 3 inches an hour, and was at the higest level for June ever reported, officials said.

At Lowell the river was within a foot of the boulevard, and in many places was backing up into small tributaries and threatening to overflow into the lowlands.

At 8 o'clock today the weather bureau in Boston reported that 5.10 inches of rain had fallen since Sunday.

"DARK" IN MANCHESTER

The western section of Manchester, N. H., was plunged into darkness early today when soaked cables failed to function.

The Daniel Webster Highway was within a few inches of a flood and State highway employes were sent out armed with sand bags to fortify the threatened spots.

The Androscoggin, Winnipesaukee, Pemigewasset and other rivers in New Hampshire also overflowed into meadows, pasture lands and highways.

Rhode Island was visited by a combination wind and rain that tore boats at Newport from their moorings and for a time cut off the naval station from communication when wires were carried away.

Northern New England observers were concerned over the prospects of more rain to follow in a storm centered over the lake region, but southern New England saw possibility of fair weather tomorrow.

Two Get Three Years Each in Mail Frauds

Pleading guilty to secret federal indictments, charging use of mails to defraud, two Cleveland, O., men were sentenced to serve three years each at Atlanta federal penitentiary by Federal Judge James A. Lowell this afternoon.

Ned Rubin, 43, and Philip Martin, 52, were arraigned on arrival here from Cleveland, where they were arrested. Federal officers said the men sent out false financial statements on which they obtained dry goods on credit for use in stores in Medford, Mt. Joy, Pa., and Madison, N. J.

He got it when he walked into the Italian Trust and Savings Bank and handed the teller a withdrawal slip for his deposit.

An estate of $14,000 willed her by her uncle who had adopted her, and contested by others was won today in Middlesex court by Mrs. Anna M. Hickey Keohane, 28, of Warren st., Arlington.

The bequest was fought by two brothers of the testator, Daniel Hickey of Arlington. Mrs. Keohane is the daughter of another brother who still lives in Ireland.

Michael T. and John Hickey petitioned for revocation of the adoption papers charging Daniel was a victim of undue influence, was of unsound mine and had given them no notice of adoption.

Consuls at Foochow Ask for Warships

Tokyo, June 11 (AP)—American, British and Japanese consuls at Foochow, China, tonight asked their governments to send warships to the Fukien province capital to protect their respective Nationals from communistic violence.

"Are BRAINY WOMEN" GOOD WIVES?

THE ANSWER, USUALLY, IS "NO" AND A DISTINGUISHED BRITISH SCIENTIST TELLS WHY---AFTER A CAREFUL AND THOROUGH ANALYSIS OF THE PSYCHOLOGY OF THE SEXES

The Companionable Sort of Wife, Instead of an Intellectual Analysis of Her Husband's Faults, Kisses His Ear and Calls Him a Sweet Old Fool

FIND OUT WHAT THERE IS ABOUT EMPTY-HEADED WOMEN THAT INTERESTS MEN!

No one dare deny that the modern intellectual woman, in most cases, is finding little happiness in marriage. . . . And her husband is equally unhappy!

The men blame the women and the women blame the men. . . . But it is silly to expect impartial opinion from those who are making a failure of marriage. . . . Their viewpoints are biased. . . . They seek to vindicate their actions.

Fair consideration can be given only by one with a good knowledge of human nature who is prepared to reason clearly. . . . . This has been done by Dr. Abdul M. Shad who recently completed a scholarly and illuminating psychological analysis of the subject. . . . The eminent English scientist has made an honest effort to ascertain which of the sexes is at fault.

The professor does not defend his sex. . . . In fact, he points out many mistakes that men should avoid. . . . He does not attack the fair sex. . . . He pleads with brainy women, who do not yet understand themselves, not to expect their men to understand them. . . . He tells exactly why intellectual wives have greater difficulty in making a success of marriage. . . . He explains why "the other woman," usually an empty-headed female, often wins.

Don't miss this particularly fine article. . . . Find out if the great psycho-analyst was right, who said "Women who think are devils to live with!" . . . The answer is in the unusually brilliant article in next Sunday's American Weekly.

LIFE OF STARR ALL SPEED AND POWER

By L. E. LAVEY

Copyright, 1931, by the Boston Evening American. All Rights Reserved.

This is the story of Starr Wyman Faithfull—of her aristocratic birth and breeding—of her metamorphosis from the reticent, intellectual beauty of her Beacon Hill days to the frenzied seeker after romance and hectic diversion of her last hysterical year as a habitue of the haunts of New York's gayest Bohemia.

It is the story of a girl, born to a heritage of wealth and culture, banned by her own kind and driven for companionship—and for forgetfulness—to the riotous stratum midway between the social register and the studios.

It is the story of her life, and of her death—the death that came to her darkly, mysterious, and left her bruised and battered body awash in the sea—the sea to which her storm-tossed spirit sent her repeatedly in search of an opiate for her galling sensitiveness.

UNYIELDING RESERVE

Through the story runs a sustained thread of an unyielding reserve, which set her apart alike from the companions of her happier days and the wild coterie of pleasure-worshippers with whom she revelled in the shadowy days of her exile from the austere ranks of Beacon Hill society.

There are those among her childhood playmates, the children of blue-blooded Boston families with whom she was classed as a matter of course, who will tell you of the youthful idiosyncrasies of Starr.

They will tell you—if they speak of her at all—of her strange perversity of mental processes, which could convert her in a flash from a buoyant, vivacious companion to a spitfire, too dangerous to be annoyed by even her closest friends.

Starr Wyman was connected by birth with families whose social rank is unquestioned.

Frank W. Wyman II, her father, scion of a cultured and influential family in St. Louis, Mo., graduated from Harvard with the class of 1900.

Four years later he married Helen McGregor Pierce of Andover, descendant of a family firmly rooted in New England tradition. Their romance had its beginning during Wyman's student days.

STARR FIRST BORN

Following the marriage, Wyman and his bride followed the call of opportunity westward. Starr, their first child, was born in Chicago in 1905.

There followed a period in Montclair, N. J., and then the call of their New England associations brought the Wymans back to Boston.

Here, through the connections of Mrs. Wyman, the doors of Beacon Hill society were open to them. Mrs. Wyman, was a cousin of Mrs. Andrew J. Peters, wife of the wealthy and socially prominent ex-mayor of Boston.

Starr McGregor Pierce, Mrs. Wyman's brother, still lives in the haughty purlieus of that Beacon Hill which rejected his niece.

Here, then, under auspicious circumstances in the most exclusive schools, began the education of the girl who was to die a dark, mysterious death in the full flush of her youth and beauty—perhaps by the hand of a jealous lover—perhaps by suicide.

(Tomorrow the Boston Evening American begins the story of the Brookline school days of Starr Wyman).

ONE QUESTION COSTS $19,000

Washington, June 11 (AP)—The Tariff Commission was required to spend $19,000, exclusive of regular staff salaries, to answer a simple Senate request—how many fish are brought into the United States and its possessions by aliens.

Its report said the data had to be collected from 36,000 vessel owners because no records were available.

In its fish inquiry the commission took 1929 as the base and found Maine and Massachusetts obtained 2 per cent of their supply from alien owned vessels.

Loses 16 Pounds of Fat---Eats As Usual

Fat Folks—Here's More Proof—One Bottle of Kruschen Salts and Sixteen Pounds Gone—Eats As Usual—Sleeps Better—Costs 85 Cents

Modern Science now makes it possible for you to easily and what's best, to SAFELY obtain a bewitchingly lithe, free-from-fat figure and actually improve health and increase your attractiveness while doing so—

Simply take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast—you can hasten the reducing action of Kruschen by going lighter on potatoes, fatty meats and pastries.

Mrs. Ethel Smith of Norwich, Conn., writes: "I lost 16 lbs. with my first bottle of Kruschen. I feel so good in many ways. Being on night duty it was hard to sleep days but now since I am taking Kruschen I sleep plenty, eat as usual and lose fat too. I have told 2 of my friends about Kruschen and they find it as I do."

Unlike other salts, Kruschen doesn't aim to reduce by rushing food thru the system—rather it's a superbly blended combination of SIX separate mineral salts which help glands, nerves and body organs to function properly—it drives poisons and harmful acid from the body—Kruschen strikes at the usual CAUSE of fat—that's why it's so amazingly successful in cases where everything else has failed!

And just stop to consider how inexpensive Kruschen is—an 85c bottle lasts 4 weeks and offers the same marvelous reducing and health-giving properties which hitherto wealthy people paid thousands of dollars to go to the famous mineral Spas of Europe to obtain. All druggists the world over sell Kruschen and will give your money back if you don't obtain the results you're after.

NAMES OF PROMINENT BOSTON MEN IN SLAIN STARR FAITHFULL'S LOVE DIARY

Book Bares Amazing Jekyll-Hyde Life of Former Boston Beauty Found Murdered on Beach

high social places of Boston and New York.

The diary holds the secrets of many prominent participants in clandestine love affairs and "whoopee parties" aboard liners to New York before sailing time.

The first entries were made about four years ago and 38 of the pages were written upon. What they revealed was not made known, but there were notations, it was learned, about "suicide" and "passion."

"Passion" was mentioned several times, as though it were paramount in the girl's mind.

WIDE VARIANCE

One detective said the general tenor of the entries was of a morbid nature. Another said Miss Faithfull disclosed her self as of a happy frame of mind, apparently showing the wide variance in entries.

The gray-brown satin, a neatly bound book four inches by six with silver lock and key, came into possession of police only after diligent search of the Faithfull home at 12 St. Luke pl., for the family was reluctant to part with it.

It contains, according to Dist. Edwards of Nassau County, a list of "interesting names" whose bearers may be called upon to appear before the Nassau County grand jury to explain their relations with the slain beauty.

It contains, besides, the record of at least one indication that Starr knew the perils into which her fantastic mode of life had led her. One of her entries clearly indicated that she felt a presentiment of death, Edwards declared.

"Mr. —— would be very much relieved to find me dead."

The "Mr. ——" of this passage, said to be a Bostonian, will be called upon to elaborate on the notations concerning him in the "log" of the girl's adventures in love.

BOSTON MEN FACE GRILLING

Although Dist. Atty. Edwards is back in New York today working on ramifications of the mysterious death of Starr Faithfull, the trail to Boston will be followed, he said. He is sending a special investigator here, he announced.

Among the men whose names he acquired here yesterday as intimates of the moody, intellectual beauty are many prominent New Yorkers, whom the district attorney has announced his intention of questioning in preparing evidence for presentation to the grand jury.

The Bostonians will be questioned by the attache of Edwards' office, who will be sent here within a day or two.

Even a cursory examination of the diary, Edwards declares, proves convincingly that his premise of violence in her strange death is well founded, and discards another all-revealing record contained in the equivocally the half-formed theory of suicide.

PRICE OF SILENCE

In the presentation of his accumulated evidence to the grand jury, Edwards is expected to produce in detail his proofs that Starr was the victim of a man who murdered her to silence her. He has indicated that well-established evidence in his possession emphatically refutes a suicidal death.

One of the central figures in the diary is prominent Bostonian. His name, the high offices he has held and his infatuation for the beautiful Starr five years ago are all set down.

Of him Edwards said: "He might be happier to have the girl dead rather than allow her to live."

The diary, which previously had been reported destroyed, had, in fact, been overlooked or deliberately hidden, the district attorney intimated.

MYSTERY OVER DIARY.

Dist. Atty. Edwards made the announcement of the discovery of the diary after a four-hour conference with Starr's family following his hurried return to New York last night.

Although the vanished journal of Starr's life had been believed to be in the possession of the family, the district attorney said it was brought to light by the independent activities of investigators on his staff.

Considerable mystery has attached to the diary since early reports that Stanley E. Faithfull, Starr's stepfather, first confirmed, then denied, rumors of its existence. He later reported to have temporized with his denial, saying that if the diary existed "it was of no importance."

Present at last night's conference in Mineola were Mr. and Mrs. Faithfull and Elizabeth Tucker Faithfull, Starr's younger sister and confidante.

HAMLIN AIDS

Most of the four hours is believed to have been occupied in questioning the dead girl's sister regarding Starr's activities and men friends.

Francis Peabody Hamlin, 28-year-old scion of a wealthy Boston family, an official of the Cunard line in Boston, furnished Dist. Atty. Edwards with the most important lead, it was learned, towards Starr's associates during her life in New York.

Through him and through the district attorney's office, the district attorney has been able to reconstruct the events of Starr's attendance at a sailing party held aboard the liner "Franconia" as it lay at its pier in New York harbor.

From this party it is said that Starr, in an intoxicated condition, was returned to the pier in a pilot boat after she had overstayed the time of the liner's sailing.

HOPELESS LOVE

According to Faithfull, his stepdaughter visited the boat to say farewell to Dr. G. Jameson Carr, ship's surgeon, a friend of long standing. From other sources, however, Edwards has learned that the real object of her visit was her hopeless love for another man aboard, either a ship's officer or a passenger.

This infatuation is believed to have prompted her world-weary remark, "Life is all shot," as she was assisted into a cab following the party on the liner, a week ago Monday.

Although there is abundant evidence to indicate that Starr had been drinking heavily when she was set ashore after the liner was in midstream, her stepfather maintained stoutly that she had been absent from her home only a few hours that day, and that she had indulged in only two cocktails in her absence.

District Attorney Edwards now seeks to lift the veil of mystery which shrouds her attendance at the two voyage party through questioning of Dr. Carr and, more particularly, the other man, the dim object of Starr's hopeless infatuation.

Dr. Carr is at present in London, and the district attorney has sought the co-operation of Scotland Yard in obtaining a statement from him.

The other man, whoever he is, holds the key piece in the structure of evidence necessary in completing the investigation, Edwards believes, and he has concentrated the energies of his staff in a hunt for the unnamed man.

"Through the Cunard Line we are trying to get a complete story from Dr. Carr, the chief steward and first officer, now in London," Edwards stated.

"The information will be called. Miss Faithfull saw all three men on May 23. We want to know whom she met in the first officer's quarters, who left the boat, and with whom she left the vessel.

TROUBLE WITH FAMILY

"Our information is that she was introduced to someone on the boat. She must have been with someone and that someone is keeping under cover. He knows what happened and we intend to find him and learn the whole truth."

Going back over the tracks, Edwards outlined the basis for his belief that the girl was murdered.

"We know," he said. "That the girl had difficulty with her family when she got drunk. Then she would get hysterical and do things.

"The autopsy of Dr. Otto H. Schultze disclosed that the girl had had a meal three hours before her death. We find that she died of drowning. Sand in tremendous quantities coming from one mile or five miles distant was found to have been literally forced down her lungs.

"She had been in the water 48 hours or more, which takes her back to some time between Friday night and Saturday morning. There were bruises on her left leg, right leg and arm.

"We know from her sister that she had a date; that she said she was going to meet someone. It seems fair to assume that someone, who had reason to get rid of her, used the method he did because he felt that everybody would suppose it a suicide."

FOUND IN HOTEL

Meanwhile additional episodes in the gay life that Starr Faithfull led came to light in New York, picturing her as an attractive blue-eyed girl of twenty-five with a carefree fondness for cocktails and parties.

On one occasion, it was learned, she was found in an alcoholic daze in a midtown Manhattan hotel, in the company of a man of fifty who said he was her husband. Concerning this episode the report of Dr. Arthur Rugeiri, then an interne at Flower Hospital, dated March 26, 1920, states:

"Marie Collins, found at the St. Paul Hotel, 40 West 60th st. They say she was found on the floor of the apartment without any clothes on. The patient was unconscious and lying in bed when I arrived.

"They gave her spirits of ammonia and brought her around. Patient was then dressed and taken to Bellevue Hospital. There was a man with her who claimed to be her husband."

CAREFULLY CALCULATED.

Dist. Atty. Edwards reached the conclusion that the dead girl was murdered in all likelihood by someone who held her head under water, despite superficial indications of suicide, he said.

The appearance of suicide was the point upon which the whole crime pivoted, he explained, because the slayer had carefully worked out the details of his crime so that it would appear to be self-destruction, not murder.

Supplementary evidence assembled during the probe of the girl's death indicated that the slaying was a crime of passion, induced by fear of exposure and complicated by the continued payment of "hush money."

A police slip at headquarters shows that at 11 p. m. on March 30, 1920, Marie Collins, 25, and James Collins, 50, were removed from the St. Paul Hotel to Bellevue Hospital, "suffering from alcoholism."

FACE BRUISED

At Bellevue Hospital, records show that Marie Collins, 24, Protestant, unmarried, was admitted at 11 p. m., and gave her mother's name as "Mrs. Helen May Faithfull," and her father's name as "Stanley E. Faithfull, 35 W. 9th st." The record states she was suffering from acute alcoholism" and that there were contusions of the face, upper lip, jaw and nose.

The admittance card states she was "noisy and unsteady," was "crying," and that she was discharged the next day when "people came." The following statement, made by Miss Faithfull, is part of the record:

"I suppose some one knocked me around a bit. I was drinking gin, as far as I knew. This is the first time I have drank anything for six months, and I have had nothing until yesterday. I don't know how many I had."

The next morning, the record states, her father and mother called, and the following statement was recorded as having been made by Faithfull:

"Nothing was wrong with her at 3:30 p. m. yesterday. I know of no reason why she was admitted here. I did mix one drink for her, incidentally, it was pre-war stuff. She never drank outside since she returned from Europe last fall, in late October. She has not had one drink outside the home."

COMPANION NOISY

Dr. Rugeiri said he remembered the case well. He said:

"There was a man in the room who gave his name, I believe, as Joseph Collins. He claimed to be the husband of Marie. He appeared to be a man of about 40, weight 135 pounds, with gray hair. He kept saying: 'I'm a war veteran—I'm a war veteran.' I had to admonish him to keep quiet while I was trying to bring the woman around. He was clad only in his underwear."

After previously denying it, Faithfull admitted his daughter had been taken to Bellevue last March. She was expecting a girl friend one afternoon, he said, and he mixed cocktails for them. But the friend preferred not to drink, so Starr had all the cocktails, three dry Martinis. It was pre-war liquor, the father asserted, and so potent that Starr remembered nothing until she awoke in the hospital late that night.

CHANGES STORY

Nor had she subsequently been able to recall what happened to her between the drinking of the cocktails and her awakening in Bellevue.

Talking in his St. Luke's pl. home, Faithfull said, last night, he had made a business trip here last week, starting Wednesday night and returning, to New York at 8 a. m. Friday morning, just an hour and a half before his step daughter set out and never re-appeared.

Later he changed this version of his trip, and said he came here Thursday. This brought a rebuke from his daughter, Elizabeth, who interrupted him to say:

"Why, Stanley, you know you went up there Wednesday, and I went with you."

Faithfull retorted sharply:

"You did no such thing; I went up alone and you know it."

Dr. Alexander O. Goettler, New York City toxicologist, who made an analysis of the vital organs of Miss Faithfull for Dr. Schultze, in his report stated that she had died of drowning in salt water.

His examination, he said, revealed there was no trace of alcohol or chloral hydrate in the brain or other organs, and that the young woman could not have been intoxicated or drugged before her death. There was a large percentage of salt water in the left auricle of the heart, he found.

VISIT MORGUE

Wyman, Starr's father, is in New York and is stopping at the Biltmore. He will probably be questioned in Mineola today. Stanley Faithfull, his wife and Elizabeth Tooks Faithfull visited the morgue at Rockville Center where the girl's body lies, after they left police headquarters. They remained but a short time and talked with the undertaker. The girl's body will be cremated today.

Two men were to have been brought in for questioning from New York, but neither came to Mineola. Asst. Dist. Atty. Martin W. Littleton, Jr., questioned one of the members of the coast guard stationed at the Brooklyn navy yard. Edwards later would say only that information previously obtained had been corroborated.

AGASSIZ STOCK SUIT QUASHED

A bill in equity brought by Homer Goodwin, Boston broker, against Rodolphe L. Agassiz, president of the Cliff Mining Co., and James MacNaughton, company director and manager, was dismissed today in Superior Court by Judge Charles H. Donahue.

The bill was to rescind a sale of 700 shares of the Cliff Co. to Agassiz and MacNaughton in 1926, plaintiff claiming that the purchasers had knowledge which the plaintiff did not, and that their purchase without disclosing their knowledge was wrongful.

Judge Donahue ruled that Agassiz and MacNaughton were not guilty of fraud in concealing a geologist's theory that copper possibly existed on the Cliff properties.

Autoist Fined Twice in Few Minutes

Fined $25 for operating without a license, Daniel Keefe, a former U. S. revenue officer, of Revere, left court in Lynn, today, got into his car and started to drive away.

He was rearrested, fined another $25 and was told by Judge Reeve, it would cost him $25 every time he drove.

Keefe's license expired on May 31, and he had failed to have it renewed.

LONDON CLUES PROBED

London, June 11 (INS)—Further mystery was added today to the life and death of Miss Starr Faithfull, whose lifeless body was found in the surf at Long Beach, N. Y., this week, as persons who had known her on this side of the Atlantic came forward with information regarding their acquaintance with her.

Rudolph Haybrook, a scenic artist, who described himself as a friend of the dead girl, described her as "very quiet and refined."

Simultaneously the Evening News published a story quoting the son of a British peer, whose identity was concealed, as saying Starr Faithfull lived apart from her mother and sister while visiting London last year, and that she was cated.

a mystery even to them.

"Last year I was compelled to assist Mrs. Faithfull and Sylvia financially, even to buy food for them, while they were living in an artist's flat in Chelsea," the peer's son was quoted as saying.

Haybrook said he had received a letter from Starr three weeks ago in which she said she was looking forward to another visit to England during the latter part of May or the first part of June.

Scotland Yard detectives prepared to question officers of the Cunard liner Franconia on her arrival here today. They planned to seek information on a report that the girl had once been put off the liner in New York while intoxi-

STARR'S DEATH REUNITES WYMANS

By JOHN H. NOONAN
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

New York, June 11—Reunited by grim tragedy after years of estrangement, a middle-aged man and woman sat together today and consoled each other in the grief that came with the mysterious death of their daughter, Starr Wyman Faithfull.

The man was Frank W. Wyman 2d of Boston. The woman, his former wife, is now Mrs. Stanley E. Faithfull, whose married name her two daughters have borne since she married Faithfull after her divorce from Wyman in 1921.

Mrs. Faithfull received her former husband today in her home, 12 St. Luke's pl., from which Faithfull had considerately absented himself.

Wyman and his ex-wife spent more than two hours together and together received the Boston Evening American reporter, to whom Wyman has denied himself during his two days in New York.

MISQUOTED, HE SAYS

When Wyman and Mrs. Faithfull said they were ready to talk Wyman declared he had yielded to requests for interviews only at the urging of his ex-wife.

"I have been consistently misquoted since this terrible thing happened, and I don't care to take any further chances," he said.

"Why are you in New York, Mr. Wyman?" he was asked.

"I am here to attend the funeral of my daughter, Starr, and, of course—" he glanced at Mrs. Faithfull—"to give what consolation I can to her mother in her bitter hour."

"I don't believe I have anything further to say now, except that I have perfect confidence that this extremely complicated case has been and will be capably handled by my good friend of long years' standing, Stanley Faithfull."

SURE SHE WAS SLAIN

Wyman refused to elaborate on his friendship with his successor in the affections of his former wife.

"Do you believe, Mr. Wyman, that your daughter committed suicide"? he was asked.

"No! Emphatically not," said Wyman. "Time and the competent authorities handling the case will prove that my daughter was murdered."

Following the interview Wyman and Mrs. Faithfull left for the Hotel Biltmore to join Stanley Faithfull for luncheon.

As they left the apartment building they forced their way through crowds of bill collectors and tradesmen. For the first time their presence revealed that the Faithfull family, once extremely wealthy, was now practically destitute.

ANTIQUES SOLD

Inquiries disclosed, that Faithfull has been forced to dispose of antiques, dating back in his family line to the 16th century, to satisfy the most insignificant bills.

Last Monday, the day the body of Starr Faithfull was washed ashore on Long Beach, her stepfather disposed of an Empire sideboard to an antique shop in Hudson st.

"I want $1000 for it, but I will take less," he said.

Evidence of the state to which the family finances have fallen was seen in the size of the bills held by the swarm of tradesmen who waited outside the door, $3 to the laundryman, $1.15 to the [illegible] and others of like amounts.

"HAVEN'T A CENT."

The collector for the laundry told today of presenting his bill to Faithfull for payment and of Faithfull's reply:

"We havn't a cent to our name. We can't pay."

His last $1 bill, Faithfull told the collector, he used to buy his stepdaughter, Elizabeth Tucker Faithfull, a ticket to Mineola, where she was to be questioned by Dist. Atty Edwards.

EVELYN OLDFIELD TALBOT BRIDE OF ROBERT LEESON TODAY

BEACON HILL

—by—

Betty Alden

MRS. "JIMMIE" DEAN OF 61 WALNUT ST., BROOKLINE, is giving a luncheon today at The Country Club for her daughter, Miss Dorothea, who will be one of the debutantes of the coming season. About 50 of her sister buds will gather to chat no doubt about the various parties which will soon be given for their pleasure. It is quite a trick to bring a girl out these days—manage so that she gets a bid to the right balls and teas, makes the Junior League and Vincent Club, and marches triumphantly up the aisle at the right moment.

BARBARA GREENOUGH

If the girl has family, money, a pleasing personality, poise, charm and a clever mother she starts out at scratch, but there are only a few who have all of these essentials. They usually start being schooled a couple of years before their debut, and the Misses Winsor's select school for young ladies is about the best starting point a maiden can have, although there are others, naturally. We have heard that a child must be registered at this socially historic institution at birth and the children of past graduates are given the preference.

Clever Mother Is Big Asset

AFTER THEY LEAVE THE SUNLIGHT OF THE schoolroom for the spotlight of the ballroom, the clever mother, who has managed to get on a few important patroness committees (which means no more than buying a block of tickets to some function which she knows nothing about and has no interest in attending), contributes generously to pet charities of Mrs. Who's Who-manity, has her house interior decorated by an impoverished celebrity, using atrocities designed or painted by derelicts of the depression, so that now she has a smiling and bowing acquaintance with at least three mothers of Junior Leaguers and maybe two Vincent Clubers. This, of course, if she has not been through the mill with previous victims.

NATURALLY, IF THE FIRST daughter makes all her milestones, a younger sister has an easier path to tread. It takes five letters of introduction by members of the Junior League, which then have to be voted on, and other formalities, before a girl is taken on as a provisional member. And let us say right here that after all it is as fair as it can be without taking in every girl who is listed as a debutante. Many reasons are given why buds don't make this important milestone; too much popularity before their presentation, too modern ideas, not well-known enough, mothers are too proud to ask for letters, or too slow in getting them in.

THEN THE DATE HAS TO be discussed with Mary Porter, who keeps the calendar to see that your daughter's ball is not put down on the same evening as the more popular daughter of Mrs. Orchid-Annie, whose punch will be more effervescent than yours and the little birds whispering this to the dear Harvard boys means the death of your party. And the boys—you must dig up someone who has the membership list to the popular college clubs, the Fly, Signet, Hasty Pudding, Institute of 1770, etc., and send invitations to them all, whether you have ever met them or not, planning on five youths to each girl.

Jane Bancroft

WHEN WE ASKED THE reason for the five-to-one equation we were told that it is to take care of the contingency of a girl or a boy being left with a "lemon" and no one will take them off their hands. With girls outnumbered, a chap who wants to dance once in a while will have to cut-in and the chance of getting away from the white elephant is assured.

What Debs Need

FROM THIS POINT ON IT is practically up to the girl and if she has beauty she can swing a lot of Harvard votes to any party to which she is invited and if she can wear clothes well, tap-dance a little, play up to the mothers of Vincent Club members, she may be considered as material for the big show and be invited to join.

IF SHE DOES NOT MAKE the Junior League, she either takes a long trip to Europe, enrolls at one of the best colleges or takes up some useful occupation. She is never heard of again; unless, of course, she marries a seventh son of a seventh son and then she is automatically, almost, elected to all the exclusive clubs as a matron and sometimes wields the club more decisively on some budding aspirant than it was used on her. The sweet young things who are stepping out in their snowy tulle and romantic ideals will have to have a high brand of courage, a sense of humor and plenty of sand to take all the jumps.

MR. AND MRS. DEAN HAVE just returned from a cruise in Chesapeake Bay on the Edward Tafts' houseboat in time for Dorothea's luncheon. Among those attending will be Jane Bancroft, Linda Collens, Katherine Johnson and Jean Read.

Columbia, S. C., June 11 (AP)—The Rev. Joseph Lynch, head of the seismographic station at Fordham University, New York city outlined today the progress of one of the most important research programs in all science—the study to discover some means by which warning of an earthquake may be given before it occurs.

So far, Fr. Lynch said, seismology has not yet reached the point where warning of an earthquake can be given, but partial warning given in Japan last November prevented a repetition of the Japanese erathquake disaster of 1923.

More Comfort in Bathing Suits Now

NO LONGER can the bathing suit be set in the casual class. It is a well thought out member of the wardrobe and as such, is deserving of a good deal of attention as to style and suitability for type.

OFTEN THE bathing suits are made with their own coats to match, so that you have a good looking ensemble for beach wear just as you insist upon having for street wear.

EVEN THE little extra bolero jackets are loved for extra beach coats.

THE MOST fascinating of all beach togs are the little extra things that one takes along to help make the day comfortable. The hats are too lovely. The larger they are the more style they have. Some of them, indeed are regular cart wheels. But they are made of the softest, floppiest of straw braids that manage to form the most picturesque sort of a frame for the faces that they cover.

THE ATTRACTIVE costume pictured is of fine wool jersey, toned salmon pink, a one-piece garment merging into tights and topped by side-pleated over-pants from curved yoke. The bodice top is white, banded in pink, while the short sleeved bolero is pink, bound in white. The hat is white, a band of lacy straw merging to deep band of pink.

SOME INGENIOUS soul has designed a beach cape made from a very long Turkish towel, striped in yellow, salmon, green and white. On one side two removable white rings are fastened through which the ends of the towel are drawn to keep the shoulder cape in place. This is also pictured and may be used as a sand mat when not wrapping one's person.

THE BAG pictured is of yellow terry cloth, rubber lined, with two handles, and zipper closing. The heeled beach sandals are of yellow crepe rubber. The rubber ball adds its gay quota of color.

Mr. Leeson's two attractive sisters, the Misses Marian and Loraine Leeson, are to be bridesmaids for Miss Talbot, as are Miss Laurel H. Holmes of New York, Miss Annette Dedrick of Albany, Mrs. Grover Loening and Mrs. Charles L. Harding. The honor attendants will be Mrs. Henry Parish, 2d, and Miss Carolyn Buckner.

George S. Tiffany will be Mr. Leeson's best man and the ushers include Owen Lloyd Winston, Arthur N. McGeoch, George C. Clarke, Jr., of New York; Albert S. Bigelow, Eliot T. Putnam, Jr.; Charles E. Mason, Jr.; Ransom F. Hodges, Jr., of Boston; William P. Jenkins of Philadelphia, Joseph W. Oliver of Pittsburgh and Richmond deP. Talbot, brother of the bride.

There has been a good deal of formal and informal entertaining for the bridal party this week, including a dinner given last evening by Mrs. Alfred Perkins Dick at the Central Park Casino.

Miss Talbot's engagement was announced by her mother, Mrs. Harold Richmond Talbot of 952 Fifth ave., in March. The Misses Leeson will return Friday to Peaches Point in Marblehead, where they and their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Leeson, spend their summers.

CELL 'GANGSTERS;' DATING THE JAZZ AGE

By Gilbert Seldes

The most exciting moving picture I have seen in a year is the study of living cells made by the scientists of the Rockefeller Institute. In spite of a clear and simple explanation I have to confess that I did not understand all of the picture. But the eye is a better servant than the brain. I saw, magnified enormously, healthy cells and sick cells and I was made to understand that the latter are not sick in their own estimation. A cell in a tumor or a cancer is from its own point of view peculiarly healthy and vigorous and carries on an energetic and victorious battle.

Eternal Warfare

These moving pictures of living cells look at first glance like the craters of the moon, or like a desolate seashore with gray mountains in the background. Presently you begin to detect motion. You see a portion of the gray forest collect itself, move forward and, with apparent determination, reach out and take hold of another cell and absorb it. You can see the wriggles of the victimized cell and almost can see the triumphant expression of the victor. These are certainly not the terms in which the scientists would like us to explain their picture; scientists are not so much concerned with the melodrama of what they show. But the layman sees exactly this and one of the hardest things is to connect what he sees with himself, for these cells exist by the millions in our own bodies and are carrying on this endless warfare—fortunately, without making us aware of it.

Some of these pictures were shown the other day, and their value to science explained. The great object is to have under our eyes a life history of the cells of our body, so that we can watch them grow and can tell the difference between those we call healthy and those we call malignant. In San Diego, California, another similar experiment has been made, and the spore which causes lockjaw has been shown actually hatching.

Dr. Carrel's Experiment

The moving picture of living tissue goes back to the experiment made about 20 years ago by Dr. Alexis Carrel, in which he managed for the first time to keep a tiny fragment of a chicken alive under laboratory conditions. The experiment captivated the imagination of the world at the time—I even recall poems being written about it—and we all thought of a heart beating away under an inverted bell jar.

The real importance of the experiment came out much later. It was not only that the tissue could be kept alive, but that it grew and multiplied to such an extent that if none had been destroyed, in 16 years the cells growing out of the original tiny piece of tissue would have equalled the volume of the whole solar system. I recall an address that Dr. Carrell made a few years ago, in which he explained why the cells in a living human person do not act the same way. They live in a sort of balance, and it is only the anarchist cell which tries to multiply itself at the expense of the others. The cell in a cancer has no respect for the healthy cell—it wants to express its own individuality and to multiply itself as often as possible without restraint and without mutual aid. The doctors call that a malignant growth, because it is very likely to destroy the rest of our body if it is not checked. And, oddly enough, the anarchist cell people use the same terms. Only we have never been quite able to isolate a malignant human being and keep him so long under scientific observation.

Dating the Jazz Age

Mr. Scott Fitzgerald, who is an authority, has recently put down the dates of the Jazz Age: from the May Day riots in 1919 to the market crash in 1929. These are the 10 years after the war and the Peace of Versailles, and it would be remarkable if they were to be known in history by the name of a kind of music. The usual explanation is that the world was weary and disillusioned and threw itself into a frenzy of activity, of which jazz was the perfect expression. That is probably as good an explanation as any, but I doubt whether it really covers the ground. There were too many people whose disillusion turned to a more unbridled license and far too many of the children of the Jazz Age had been totally unmoved by the war or had found it a great lark. It was certainly a lucky coincidence that anything as bright and gay as jazz music should have been preparing before the war and captured the world when the world might have grown sour. I think it was William Bolitho who said that the secret of Maurice Chevalier's popularity in France was that he seemed to have banished the war: he was the first man after the war who sang the old songs as if nothing had happened. This is, of course, totally out of keeping with our ideas of the Jazz Age.

The Tone of Authority

The conflict between Mussolini and the Vatican is just the sort of thing the innocent bystander ought to keep out of. But there is a single line in a recent statement of Pope Pius XI which is worth repeating: "One can ask for our life, but not our silence." It has a kind of dignity and authority which are rarely heard in public utterances.

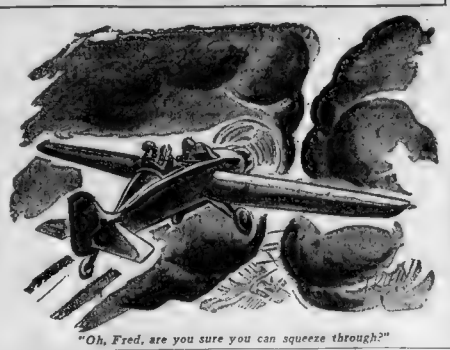

Mussolini has not been up to his excellent epigrammatic style in his recent pronouncements. Calling the degrading insult to Toscanini "a banal incident" was not worthy of him. On the other hand, Bernard Shaw quoted an epigram of Mussolini's the other day which shows that the ruler of Italy was not only an old newspaper man himself but a good one. He said, "There is a vacant throne in every country of Europe today." This is a free bid for dictators, but of course Mussolini was too modest to tell the truth. What he meant was "except one."

Any Girl to Almost Any Escort

Of all life's irritations
The very worst is this:
You take me out to dinner
And you think you rate a kiss:

I don't suppose you'd credit
This fact, but it is true:
I'd rather pay my dinner check
And not be kissed by you!

In Russia

—By Bruno Lessing—

Berlin—Met an intelligent German who had just returned from Russia.

"I was there a year doing engineering work," he said, "and, honestly, I haven't the faintest idea of what is going on. I can tell you all about the social life in Moscow, in which I and my friends mingled.

"But there is a great deal of other life going on which I know nothing about. Because I do not speak Russian fluently.

"Newspapers are under control. The government loves to give you guides who take you everywhere. But the guides are under control.

"Besides which, Moscow and Leningrad are two tiny dots on the map. There are about two hundred million Russians whom you never see. I had the feeling that great things were going on—I mean churning and yeasting and fermentation and groping and planning and fearing—among all those millions. But I couldn't grasp it. I don't believe the Russians themselves know what is going on.

"The leaders are a mere handful. If the people or the army ever became excited they would hardly have to go to the trouble of what we call a revolution. The government would be crushed as you crush a mosquito.

"Just now everyone you meet in Russia is enthusiastic over the five-year plan. But, of course, you really cannot meet all Russians.

"Life in Russia struck me as being feverish. One kind of fever among the foreigners, another kind among government officials and police, another kind among the emancipated peasants whom I ran across, still another kind among the workers. Nothing absolutely normal.

"The government's undertaking to develop the ethical side of 200,000,000 citizens without the aid of religion leaves me speechless.

"I made many inquiries and, for my pains, saw many a shrug of shoulders.

"My own opinion—and as your country is so full of opinions, you ought to grant me the right to have a few of my own—is that the Russian people themselves do not yet know what it is all about.

"They are following their leaders and they are hoping. God pity the leaders if this big following is ever disappointed.

"One thing, however, I did learn. And that is that Russia is too big and too complicated to be described by generalities.

"I honestly believe that Stalin, himself, the present head of the government, is not clear in his mind as to what is going on. It is all too fast, too primitive, too conglomerated and chaotic.

"The roots of centuries have been torn up. As far as I could see the people are as meek as sheep. But, being a German, that did not strike me as being natural. Sooner or later two hundred millions will want to assert themselves."

And now that guy has got me worrying.

Corner Church

The church upon my corner
Has always seemed so gray!
Its doors have opened darkly
Upon each warm spring day.

But now someone has planted
Slim rows of scarlet flowers
Around the church—they murmur
A song across the hours!

The church seemed always heavy,
And just a little sad,
But now it seems to sparkle—
I think that God is glad!

Tobacco

By Idwal Jones

For a schoolmaster of the efficient, case-book type Professor Pitkin of Columbia is rather broad-minded on the subject of tobacco. He believes that millions of people need to be slightly narcotized "in order to endure the world and themselves."

But on the whole he is averse to the weed and cites, as was to be expected, the cases of Ford and Edison. And, if "imagery"—to quote the Abbe Dimnet—is the "core of thinking," then the smoker loses out in check-up of this lively trait, being, in fact, 22 per cent below the non-smoker.

The Professor wishes that "some amiable fanatic would finance a disinterested investigation of the smoking habits of eminent men during their years of intensive learning."

I am not sure that investigations convince anyone very much. Their results convince only the biased. And people being what they are, it is absurd to be logical about them.

I know of a young woman biologist in the University of California who spent five years experimenting with tobacco on a lot of rats. Her backers expected to get some lamentable data that would impress pupils and go well with colored pictures of ruined hearts in the back of the physiology textbooks.

They Refused to Die

Well, the rodents had to spin in cages and for ten hours daily breathe the fumes of burning tobacco—a mixture of latakia and perique. It was a pitiable waste of good tobacco, I think, and altogether too good for rats. That mixture was beloved of Addison, the late Cardinal Rouleau of Quebec, and the productive Hilaire Belloc.

It was supposed to kill the rats inside of a week. But it didn't. On the contrary, they throve. They inhaled it with unquestioning relish. The little beggars couldn't wait for smoke time to come round. They drank smoke like any tugboat skipper. They revolved their cages with prodigious energy, in a delirium of joy. Their birth rate increased.

The experiment proved, in three volumes, that tobacco, instead of being a depressant, was a stimulant. This annoyed the backers very much, and they lost interest in the venture. I am informed by Prof. Lal—who is a scholar though a non-smoker—that the data on these eminent rodents was suppressed and nothing of it has leaked out to this day.

They Are Smokers

Since Ford has nothing of interest to say to me, I have never paused to inquire on his attitude toward tobacco. As for Edison, he always refers to himself as "tobacco-chewing old mechanic."

Einstein is an indefatigable cigar smoker. I don't know whether he thinks in "images" or not. His thinking is really a sort of celestial chess playing.

But Charles Proteus Steinmetz, the electrical wizard, was assuredly "imagic" in his thinking. He cut his first teeth on cigars, trained on Hamburg stogies of the blackest and most powerful calibre. I saw him almost daily for three years, and he always had a monstrous cheroot between his teeth, which, because he was a gnome, looked to be the size of a chair leg.

He spent a fortune on these cigars, which are called by the trade "Porto Rico bludgeons." Happily for his associates, for one whiff of them would have floored the fiercest lighted these infamous things. He chewed them up fast, a dozen a day. Technically, I admit, he was a non-smoker.

Thinkers Smoke, Too

The good Abbie Dimnet, when I talked with him, talked charming imagery through a dense cloud of cigarette smoke. And certainly his thinking is as good as Professor Pitkin's.

Plowing through "Living Authors" in search of evidence that tobacco is inimical to writing with "imagery," I can find none. Tomlinson, Coppard, Bennett, Harold Nicolson, Wodehouse, Osbert Sitwell, Thomas Mann, Machen, and Wyndham Lewis thrust their imagistic faces at me with a maxillary grip on their pipes.

So do a large number of ladies of imagistic gifts whose nicotine habits I refrain gallantly from exposing.

We are still in a Puritanical fixation regarding tobacco. And because of that so many of our Presidents ditch their cigars when they get photographed. They are as shy of being seen actually smoking as are the bathing girls—on the posters.

Other Men's Thoughts

From "Journal of Things," by Arnold Bennett; Saturday, Florence:

"One of the most celebrated actresses in the whole world came to dinner. She smoked two cigars. She said: 'I do like coming here. I adore cigars, and this is the only house where I can smoke them.' I said: 'But you could smoke them anywhere.' She said: 'No. It wouldn't do. People would say I was unsexed.'

"And who could deny it? Not I.

"It is curious that thirty years ago women had to smoke cigarettes in secret because in public a cigarette had the magical effect of unsexing them, but today they can smoke cigarettes openly and keep their womanhood."

ton, former ambassador to Germany.

Mr. Houghton warns this country that it must do its share toward the relief of Germany, if other nations remit or suspend reparation payment, since the collapse of Germany would be dangerous to the world.

War is a complicated thing. First, we were told we must send ten billion dollars to help the Allies beat Germany. We sent the ten billions, and three million men. The Allies did beat the Germans, broke them financially. And now we are told to make other sacrifices, to help Germany recover from the beating that we helped the Allies administer.

German censors of moving pictures propose to prevent "triangle stories, by cutting out the wicked angle which enters married life to separate the other two angles.

That will make life hard for scenario writers.

German censors once held up a picture that showed a railroad wreck, because it might cut down the sale of railroad tickets.

Cutting out the wicked angle from the triangle will not, unfortunately, diminish the number of such triangles. They have existed ever since the snake appeared in the Garden of Eden.

In fact, there was in Eden a real triangular lady named Lilith, eliminated from our Bible, Old Rabbinical literature teaches that Lilith was the first wife of Adam, but got tired of him and became a demon. She was a lovely woman from sunrise to sunset and a snake the rest of the time.

In time, of course, the wicked triangles will disappear. But it will take about one million years for that.

Stalin, copycatting his capitalistic brother, Andrew W. Mellon, will borrow $800,000,000. He probably will be less fortunate than Secretary Mellon, who had more than six thousand million dollars offered him, when he asked for only eight hundred millions.

It will interest American workers to know that Russia is not borrowing eight hundred millions to make up a deficit. Russia borrows "to complete 518 new factories, finish 1040 tractor stations, and fulfill the five-year plan."

All that means work and wages.

Finland, tucked away to the northeast corner of Russia, like a fly on the hip of a horse, defies the big nation, actually proposing to compete with Russia in the world's lumber market.

The Finns possess an intelligence lacking in many Americans, know that any attack by Russia would be an airplane and gas attack, and, according to H. R. Knickerbocker, the city of Helsingfors is building houses proof against gas, saying that they know that "an airplane raid would wipe out Finland's capital city."

It would do the same for New York, Chicago, Washington and San Francisco, but our distinguished government does not seem to realise it, and goes on building pogpun coast defense guns, as though airmen could be expected to fly down and say "please shoot me."

PSYCHOLOGY TO AID DRY FORCE

Washington, June 11 (AP)—A self-styled "unsophisticated, undiluted professor from the Bible belt" has undertaken the task of making psychology a prohibition enforcement weapon.

Fred N. Gregg, professor of psychology and education at Nebraska Wesleyan University, is holding classes at the prohibition bureau daily for 24 picked men from the 12 prohibition districts.

In two weeks they are expected by him to return to their headquarters well versed in the mental gymnastics of the human race. Ideas acquired here are to be passed along by them to the more than 2000 agents who will comprise the federal enforcement division beginning July 1.

He said he believed Easterners do not sense the dry sentiment of the remainder of the country.

VORENBERG FOR LOW PRICES

Increased sales at department stores, brought about through low-price campaigns, offer a remedy for the recovery of general business, according to Felix Vorenberg, president of Gilchrist's.

Greater retail business, he explained, would start a wave of activity which would benefit manufacturers, wholesalers, railroads and other lines bringing employment to large numbers of persons.

Explaining a policy formed by his concern, Mr. Vorenberg said:

"About a week ago the sales promotion department and the merchandise managers of Gilchrist's met to discuss the problem of unemployment and the accompanying business depression. They came to the conclusion that if all the department stores in the city would make a drive on low prices, business would increase, the turnover would be greater, more goods would have to be manufactured and money would once more be in easy circulation."

THIS IS LIFE

WE SLACK AT OUR WORK, SWEAT AT OUR PLAY, DROP DEAD AT 50

—By ROBERT E. ROGERS—

I HAVE A LETTER from an old student of mine who reads this column, suggesting that this is a good time to say something to the boys and girls who this month are leaving school for good. That is a large order, since all advice of the sort must be so general that it can have but little bearing on any one individual problem. But I am thankful for the suggestion and will try to distill my own little experience into something that may be useful. So here goes!

ROBERT E. ROGERS

These are not pleasant times to be leaving school. Opportunities aren't many, jobs are scarce; the boy or girl facing the business world may be forgiven if he feels a little uncertain about his future.

My first suggestion, then, is naturally: Why leave school, unless you absolutely must? Don't leave school unless you absolutely have to. Many boys and girls, I know, are glad to get out of school as soon as the law will allow them, glad to leave grammar school or high school and get into life. That's natural, sometimes, but it's foolish. It's especially foolish this year.

Why Not More Schooling?

Unless your labor is absolutely needed to provide food for your family, stick in school another year, till things get a bit better. If you have graduated from high school and can't afford college, take a post-graduate course. Even for college men and women this is not bad advice. It was given by the dean of Barnard last week. If you can possibly manage it, you will be better off in school than out of school and unemployed. If your people are comfortably fixed it is almost criminal of you to compete for jobs in an over-supplied market where so many people need jobs bitterly. Especially if you are the daughter of well-to-do parents you ought not to take a job now, unless it happens to be that kind of highly specialized technical sort of job which most people couldn't fill at all.

If you must go to work, knowing that you have a good preparation, a good mind and some reasonable prospects of success, don't begin to worry about your life work. It won't hurt you to change jobs pretty rapidly for the first five years. Even if you are a college graduate, it won't hurt you. After all, you do not pick your life work. It picks you. Literally, your job picks you when you are ready for it. But you can help in the process by getting what varied experience you can and trying out things that offer.

It will help, of course, if you do not think of getting married too soon. The boy who marries at 20 has not merely given hostages to fortune, as Bacon says, but he has limited his chance to take opportunities freely. The same is true of the girl, to a less extent. He travels the fastest who travels alone, said Kipling, rather cynically but with a good deal of hard-boiled truth. The chances are that the person you marry at 30 will be a more suitable mate than the one you admire at 20.

Don't Be Too High Hat

Don't be choosy about opportunities. Don't be high-hat about your own worth or value. Take what offers for the good that there may be in each offer. If I remember correctly I had five jobs in four years after I left college. I didn't have to ask for any of them. I took what offered and made the best of it, until the job that was to be my job took me. Incidentally, each one of those first five jobs paid me less money than the one before it. That doesn't matter so much. What does matter is that one thing often leads naturally to another and that experience is never wasted. Everything is fish that comes to the net, if you are wide-awake enough to make use of it.

Don't overlook the side issues. Offers will come to you to do things, to undertake activities which won't have a cent of money in them. They will involve extra work, out of which you won't be able to see that you are getting anything. But those side issues are as likely as not to lead indirectly to something that will make money and will be important for you. I was once asked to give a free lecture before a very commonplace audience. There was, apparently, nothing in it for me. I took it, and, as I can see now, it led directly over a period of some 10 years to a permanent lecture course with a registration which has been as high as 1500 people, which pays well in satisfaction, reputation, and money. Accept anything. There's a prize in every package.

Furthermore, most things come by personal contacts. The more people you can know and work with, the more people will be thinking of you when something good is done, when they have a job or an opportunity or an honor to offer. The man who lives in the vacuum of his specialty loses out on a great many things.

Loafing Is Costly

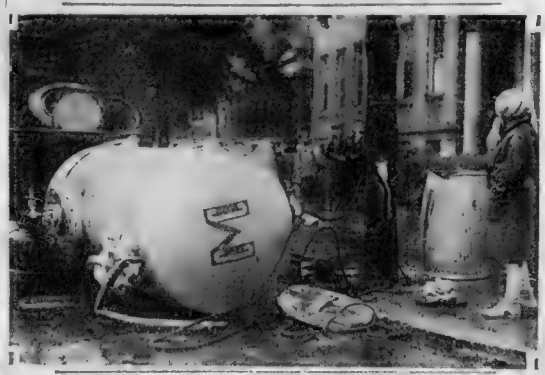

Don't be taken in by this current American sham-philosophy that a person has to play a great deal in order to keep fit. It simply isn't true. Most people do not work at anything near their capacity. A lot of the high cost of living is the result of people loafing on the job. The average laborer, as one sees him in the streets, is probably doing about a third of a day's work. But many people in business, who pride themselves on being efficient, probably waste and fritter away as much of their time. President Eliot once said that the chief value of education is that it gets a man into the habit of being able to apply himself intently to matters which of themselves do not interest him. To apply himself intently! That is the secret.

We are making fools of ourselves in America over play, pleasure, relaxation, and all that sort of thing. We slack at our work and sweat at our play—and drop dead at 50 as a result of strenuous exercise. We go away on a week-end holiday and come back all fagged out because we have been on the go all the time. And yet we have a fear of over-working which is almost an obsession. Generally speaking, hard work never hurt anybody as much as ill-considered play.

Develop a certain amount of sales resistance. The fashionable economic theory tells us that the only road to prosperity lies in everybody's spending the money which he hasn't got for luxuries which he doesn't need. Be that as it may be! Your job as an individual who hopes to raise a family and provide for it is to keep yourself from becoming one of the 54 per cent who at age 65 are dependent on charity or relatives. Our high pressure business economists will tell you that the way to make everybody prosperous is for everybody to spend a little more than he has. But I'm telling you! Don't!

SON OF JUDGE IS FINED $50

Although he was not at the wheel, Stewart B McLeod, son of Judge Stewart McLeod of Brookline court, was found guilty of drunken driving in Lynn court today

Commenting that it was a case where "the law and common sense did not jibe," Judge Ralph W. Reeves imposed a fine of $50 after he heard evidence that McLeod allowed Lawrence Demebritis, Tech instructor, to drive while under the influence of liquor.

Atty. William McSweeney, of Salem, appealed the case for McLeod and the latter was held on bonds of $300. McLeod was arrested by Lynn police two weeks ago. Because Demebritis had no driver's license, McLeod was charged with responsibility in the case.

BOOK THIEVERY CHIEF HUNTED

Police are searching for William Mahoney for questioning in connection with charges made against him by Harold B. Clarke, now being held in $5000 bail for the larceny of valuable books from New England libraries

Mahoney, described by Clarke as the arch-book thief of the country, was at first believed by police to be a mythical person

As a result of this information and from data gained by reading of letters of Clarke, Inspector Warren Lieas went to New York today. Many of these letters were from him, considered eminently respectable and honest and, police say, contained offers to purchase stolen books if they were sufficiently camouflaged.

More than a hundred books were also recovered yesterday. One package was intercepted at South station, others were seized at a South End hotel and others were turned over by a Roslindale man who said Clarke had left them at his house

It is expected that several arrests will be made both here and in New York in connection with the newly revealed evidence

Mrs. Winifred Clarke, still protesting her belief in her husband's innocence of the charges against him, met him for the first time since his arrest at the Worcester County jail yesterday.

BETTER POLICE PROTECTION AT POND

Mayor Larkin and Aldermen Rush Projects in Effort to Ban Lawless Groups

Acting upon the complaint of residents concerning nude bathing and wild revels at Wright's Pond, Medford, two committees of the Medford board of aldermen have started corrective measures.

Strict rules governing the pond will be immediately prepared by Mayor Larkin with the assistance of the legislative committee of the aldermen and City Solicitor Johnson. Additional police also will be assigned to the pond.

FENCE IS STARTED

Mayor Larkin had the city start construction of a high iron fence today at the pond, to prevent the public from trespassing on adjoining residential property. This fence will divide the part of the area used by the public from the residential area and will prevent "wild and boisterous auto parties," complained of by the residents, from traversing any of the new streets in that section except one short street which leads from Elm st. directly to the pond.

A gang of men were also at work today grading the new parking space, removed from the residential district to the opposite side of the pond. Powerful arc lights will be installed as soon as poles can be set, this work being carried forward by Supt. Henry A. Gaffney of the wire department.

Acting upon a second petition signed by 371 residents of the northerly part of Medford, bathing in Wright's pond is to be practically restricted to Medford residents. Special Officer Frank Brewster estimates that from 50 to 80 per cent of the crowds at the pond on some days are residents of other cities

RAPS OUT-OF-TOWNERS

"The only reason so many people come to Wright's pond from out of town," said Alderman William A. Ward today, "is because they come here to flaunt all laws of decency. They virtually have issued a challenge to Medford to restrain them and it is just about time that Medford took up that challenge. The place has been a menace and a disgrace."

Wright's pond was part of Medford's water supply before the metropolitan system was constructed. The Wright's pond property was under control of the water and sewer commission and has never been transferred to any other city department, even though it has been used by the city for other than recreational purposes

George E. Hassell, chairman of the public property committee, said this body will hold a conference with the water and sewer commissioners to prepare new rules

President James W. Norton of the Medford aldermen stated today that the time had come for stricter supervision and control over the Wright's pond area

Holiday Bells to Ring Out in Newton

Church bells in Newton will ring out their greetings on holidays as they did before they were ordered silenced by Mayor Sinclair Weeks after a complaint by some of the residents that they were awakened by the bells when rung on holidays at 7 a. m.

This followed the ringing on Washington's Birthday. Patriotic organizations got busy, with the result that the mayor rescinded his order in this respect and the bells may be rung between 9:30 and 10 a. m. on holidays.

FIVE AND TEN

By Fannie Hurst

(Copyright, 1929, by Fannie Hurst)

(This famous story has been made into a talking picture by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with Marion Davies in the leading role.)

IT CAME as a shock to Rarick that the suggestion to unload himself of the great property of his town house should come from his daughter.

They had been sitting over after-dinner coffee on one of those evenings which, during the months since the death of Jenny, his daughter had dutifully apportioned off, as if allowing him just so much time out of the more-than-ever crowded budget of her days.

In a sense this was true. Since the death of her mother, a rigid, self-made rule, which she had not allowed to lapse in the fifteen months, except during the periods of absence from the city, had been to set apart two evenings of the week, either to accompany her father to a concert or opera, or remain with him in his library.

The concussion of her mother's death, coming, as it should not have been permitted, out of, an ignorance and innocence of the facts, had been an irritant that sent her skyrocketing into a state half noisy, half hysterical.

"I don't give a damn for anything now" she had cried, the morning they had begun to pluck the finery from the waiting hospital bed of Jenny, as you would pluck the feathers from a swan. She had gone rather consistently about not giving it.

"I'd be a fine one to go into mourning, wouldn't I?"—when she troubled at all to explain. "She would be the first to howl laughter at it. She despised long faces and emotional sideshows."

That was probably true. There had been no ostensible period of mourning for Avery, even in the days when Jenny's face had resembled a wax mask that was melting downward from the corners. To Rarick the formal period of mourning did not exist.

The affairs of household went on pretty much as usual, except that after the first blank weeks of anoci, Jennifer began to spend the evenings with occasions. The formal dinner, never too frequent a function with Jenny, because of the strain of Rarick, who never attended, became the rule.

They were mixed parties Jennifer held that year, frantically assembled parties, without social rhyme or reason; social fringe assemblages that Jenny would have tried to avert; sometimes parties with the servants mopping up small pools of wine from the dining room floor the morning afterward, and scraping the marred surface for fresh wax jags

In the main Rarick did not protest, except on the occasion when young Rodney Marie finding one of the butlers' bicycles propped in a rear hall—where he

DAILY TRUE STORY
HER GILDED HERO

ALMA WAS INTENTLY WATCHING THE COWBOY

THE TRANS-CONTINENTAL train, blocked by a washout in the mountains ahead, panted to a halt in a little Arizona town. This was in the days before general airplane travel had made crossing America a matter of hours, and Alma Stanley, after three tiring, dusty days, welcomed the halt.

She peered out of the window and then turned to her mother. "Do you think we'll see any cowboys here?" she asked.

Alma had never seen a cowboy except in the movies. But the movie cowboys had been just what she expected them to be —all of them six feet tall, strong and slender, with big silk handkerchiefs about their necks and two ivory-handled pistols hanging from broad leather belts.

Mrs. Stanley also peered through the window before answering her daughter. "Maybe there are some here," she said "Why don't you get out and take a little walk. I heard the conductor say we would be here for an hour or more. But don't go far. And maybe Fred would like to go with you."

Fred Woodward looked up from the magazine he had been reading, grinned and shook his head.

"Not for me," he said. "I've seen enough cowboys in my life and I'd rather stay here in the shade. But if you want me to go, of course I'll do it."

He started to get up but Alma said, "Never mind. I'll just look around for myself."

As she stepped from the train she felt vaguely disappointed about Fred. She loved him and was engaged to him and it had been thoughtful of him to offer to accompany her and her mother on this long journey. But if only he were more like the strong, forceful men she saw in the movies. If only he thrilled her as they did. If only——

Day Dream Ends
Here's a Real Cowboy

Alma, walking along the one and only street of the little town, looked up and her day dream ended. Coming toward her was a real cowboy and she thrilled at the sight.

He was everything that a cowboy should be. He was 6 feet tall, boldly handsome and his dark eyes were shadowed beneath a wide sombrero. Leather gauntlets embossed with silver were on the wrists, a flowing handkerchief was about his neck and his silk shirt billowed in the slight breeze. His shoes were high heeled, pointed and nearly hid from beneath the fringes of his leather chaps. Two pistols which seemed as large as cannon to Alma flapped against his thighs in gaily decorated holsters.

His eyes met Alma's and he stopped and pretended to be absorbed in a sign on a nearby building. But Alma knew that he was covertly watching her, that he was interested in her. She thrilled with the knowledge. Why couldn't Fred be like that?

Alma, intent in her admiration of the handsome, picturesque cowboy, suddenly became aware of the fact that someone was standing behind her and talking in a hoarse rumble. She turned around.

Leaning against a pole was a squat, bow-legged man who was also looking at the cowboy and apparently talking to himself. He was unshaved, and as Alma watched he frankly expectorated a stream of tobacco juice and then just as frankly wiped his mouth with the sleeve of his flannel shirt. He wore two pairs of overalls, one over the other, and their legs had been rolled over cat-high boots which were dirty, scuffled and run down at the heel.

"Well, I'll be ——." Alma heard him say. Then he raised his voice. "Hey," he called. Then, "Hey you. I mean you in the pretty pants." Alma realized he was talking to the cowboy.

With the realization she drew back in alarm. She had learned from the movies how quickly cowboys are moved to anger. Any instant this one might draw one of his large pistols and—

The cowboy turned, looked at the man who had called to him, and then turned away again. The latter, walking stiffly, moved until he was directly behind the cowboy. Then, as Alma watched, he raised one foot, drew it back and then shot it forward. The cowboy was immediately in front of the swinging foot and the inevitable happened. The cowboy jumped, turned around and then, without a word, walked rapidly away.

Grinning, the bow-legged man watched him disappear. Then he turned to Alma, taking off his battered, almost shapeless hat.

"I feel better now," he said. "I've been wanting to do that for a long time."

For a moment Alma's surprise was so great that she couldn't answer. Then she said, "Weren't you afraid he would — would shoot you? Didn't you know he was a cowboy?"

"Do what?" asked the man. He was obviously puzzled by Alma's question. Then his face broke into a grin

"You're from the East, aren't you, ma'am?" he asked. Then as Alma nodded, he continued, "I thought so," he said. "Well, if you had to put up with that sort of thing you'd want to take a swift kick yourself. Do you know who that was?"

Only a Dude
No Cowboy at All

Without waiting for an answer he went on

"That was Montgomery Pinkribbon. Or maybe it was Clarence Bowtie. I been seein' 'em now for two months and I've had enough Paradin' around in silk shirts and six-guns and pretendin' they're cowboys."

"But isn't he?" asked Alma

"Hell, no," answered the man "Excuse me, please," he hastily added. "He's just one of them dudes campin' over in the hills. I was over there one day and they've got regular tents and beds and the Lord knows what. Cow boys! He punctuated his explanation with another stream of tobacco juice.

But aren't there any real cowboys around here any more" asked Alma. Somehow the silk-shirted figure didn't seem so glamorous now

"Sure," answered the bowlegged man. "I been a puncher ever since I was big enough to ride a hoss. I'm with the Lazy W outfit and I come in today to get the mail."

Slowly, very slowly, Alma walked back to the waiting train. "See any cowboys?" asked Fred.

"Oh, the devil with cowboys," answered Alma as she sat on the arm of his seat and slowly stroked his hair.

WANT FORCES MRS. WHITNEY TO SUE AGAIN

REOPENS CASE WHEN 2-YEAR TRUCE FAILS

Society Wife Deplores Publicity, but Says That She Must Have Cash

The Whitney marital bark is "on the rocks" again.

After two years of resumed reconciliation following cross-suits for divorce in 1929, Mr. and Mrs. Harold O. Whitney are parted by a separate support suit brought by the wife of the wealthy clubman.

She seeks support for herself and two children the two children who ended the divorce hearings for reconciliation when a Laconia, N. H., judge threatened to grant them to a third party.

"Oh, I deplore all this publicity over again but I simply must have money to live on," the young society matron said today.

"I heard that he had financial reverses, but he hasn't told me anything of them."

She would not comment further. Atty. J. Walton Tuttle, of Framingham, counsel for Mrs. Whitney, filed the papers in probate court.

LIVES ON BEQUEST

It was revealed today that Mr. and Mrs. Whitney, although living under the same roof part of the time and appearing together at social functions, have really been estranged for some time

Whitney is on a visit to Connecticut, according to friends. He could not be reached

Mrs. Whitney, in her suit, charges that although she has been living in her husband's home at 58 Pinckney st., she has been kept from virtual poverty only because she is getting about $200 a month under the terms of a relative's will

SUITS DROPPED

Her husband, she claims, has failed to support her and the children, Pamela Ann, eight, and Russell Arthur, seven, although he made a private agreement in writing to pay $7000 a year

The divorce battle of the couple, staged in superior court at Laconia, N. H., attracted wide attention because of the prominence of the families and the sensational charges hurled.

Each charged misconduct.

When the judge announced he would not grant a divorce to either and would grant custody of the children to a third party, the couple got together and, by agreement, dropped all court action.

Crippled Youngsters Have Their Annual Beach Treat Indoors

DOROTHY SANTOS JEANNETTE SHASHEEN

Three of the more than 3000 crippled and underprivileged children from Boston institutions who were guests today of the Boston Automobile Club's annual outing to Nantasket Beach. Because of the rain the doors of the Nantasket Hotel were thrown open and the children romped and played indoors just as heartily and happily as though Old Sol had supplied sunshine aplenty and they were out on the warm, sandy beach. Above are Herbert Haynes of Middlesex st., Dorothy Santos of Oswego st. and Jeannette Shasheen of Hudson st. (Staff photos.)

3000 CHILDREN ON OUTING

More than 3000 crippled and underprivileged children from Boston institutions were guests today at the Boston Automobile Club's annual outing on Nantasket Beach.

The children were transported in buses and private automobiles to the Nantasket hotel, where, due to the inclemency of the weather, the beach party was held indoors

Dorchester Women Plan Mass Meeting

Women of the Fields Corner and adjoining sections of Dorchester will stage a mass meeting Monday night at Town Field to arouse interest in the bill of Sen. Joseph Finnegan for a municipal building in that section.

The Dorchester Community Club, headed by Mrs. William J. Burke, president, will sponsor the meeting that will be held immediately following a twilight baseball game.

Working with Mrs. Burke are Mrs. Bertram A. McKenzie, vice-president; Mrs. C. F. Merrigan, secretary; Mrs. Frank Baker, treasurer; Mrs. Alexander McGillvary, historian, and the board of directors, including Mrs. Thomas Garvey, Mrs. James Curran, Mrs. John J. Collins, Mrs. Timothy Ahearn, Mrs. John Concannon and Mrs. Andrew Ryan.

PAPERS MISSING IN ARSON TRIAL

Admission by Thornton G. Wilson, official of a Boston insurance brokerage, that he had failed to obey a defense summons to bring into court all data in the case, featured the trial of John B. Richardson of Arlington, in Superior court at East Boston today.

Richardson, a Boston real estate man and church worker, is charged with burning a building in Newton last January with intent to defraud 10 insurance companies.

Wilson said that after receiving the summons yesterday he received a letter from the office of an insurance lawyer, who picked out certain papers and kept them.

Wilson testified insurance companies paid $33,500 to holders of mortgages on the burned property.

Dr. L. Charter, state chemist, testified he analyzed contents of cans found in the burned building. Five contained kerosene, one gasoline, two oily water, and nine were punched in the cans, he said

Fire Chief Clarence Ranlett of Newton testified he found 25 cans in the burning house

PUPILS IN PERIL IN OLD SCHOOLS

The Boston Evening American has found more wooden fire escapes on Boston public schools in its survey to improve accommodations for the children of this city.

They are attached to the Harbor View school in Harbor View st., Dorchester, a wooden building erected 48 years ago. Wooden fire escapes for 200 little children, ranging from 4 to 8 years of age, to travel over in case of a blaze in the building

This school contains four rooms and the children attend kindergarten, first, second and third grades The school is so crowded that 20 kindergarten children have to wait until afternoon to attend.

131-YEAR-OLD SCHOOL

Another obsolete school revealed by the Boston American is the Samuel Dexter school in Harvard st., Charlestown. It has the doubtful honor of being the oldest in the city of Boston. It was built 131 years ago and houses 170 children from kindergarten to third grade. Children attend classes on three floors of the building.

Although the Samuel Dexter school has a brick veneer exterior, the stairways within the structure are of wood and therefore a fire hazard.

The Boston schoolhouse commission hopes to open a large intermediate school at the junction of Main, Wallace, Eden and Russell sts., Charlestown, by the spring vacation of next year, which will permit the abandonment of the Samuel Dexter school.

Still another antiquated school found by the Boston American during its survey is the Comins school in Tremont st., South End.

ANOTHER ANCIENT PERIL

This venerable building was erected 81 years ago and contains 425 children, who attend grades 1 to 8. It is four stories high.

The exterior walls are of brick veneer, but wooden interior stairways represent a distinct fire hazard.

The Martin school at Huntington ave. and Worthington st., Back Bay, is another oldtime structure that should be equipped with a modern fire escape. The school was built 46 years ago. Although 300 children occupy the three floors of this building there is no fire escape on it The children attend grades 5 to 8.

Hoisting Machine Kills Father of 8

John J. Powell of 181 Ninth st., South Boston, father of eight children, was killed when his right arm was severed in a hoisting machine at the Elevated power house, Lincoln wharf and Battery st. today.

Plane Forced Down on Stoughton Links

A small biplane flying to the Lynn airport from Philadelphia was forced down by heavy fog in Stoughton today and landed safely on the fairways of the Stoughton Golf Club. The pilot and a passenger, whose identities could not be learned, left the plane, which bore the name, "Jacob Aircraft X 918." After making a telephone call to Lynn from a nearby house they left for their destination

The plane was undamaged in its forced landing.

Satin smoothness certified by Torsiographic tests

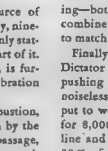

STUDEBAKER'S Dictator Eight engine gets an almost perfect score for "rounded" performance. Nothing in its price class equals The Dictator's even power flow.

Here indeed is "rounded" performance which is unique in a car of The Dictator's low price. Rounded not only figuratively, as shown by the Torsiographic record, but rounded as well in every function that makes motoring a pleasure and an economy.

There is no mystery in the source of The Dictator's smoothness. A sturdy, nine-bearing crankshaft, balanced not only statically but dynamically, is at the heart of it. What little vibration may survive, is further minimized by a crankshaft vibration damper of remarkable efficiency.

That is but the beginning. Combustion, or firing, is made steady and even by the use of a dual carburetor and gas passage, which assures equal fuel being fed to each cylinder, without "starving" the extreme end cylinders.

Full-power exhaust muffling, which conserves horsepower, and carburetor silencing—both introduced by Studebaker—combine to give The Dictator engine quiet to match its smoothness.

"Rounded" Performance

The Torsiograph, one of the most nearly infallible of automotive laboratory instruments, records accurately the vibration of any rotating shaft. The closer the record chart approaches a true circle, the more nearly perfect the balance of the crankshaft. At the left are shown the Torsiographic records of The Dictator Eight nine (9) bearing crankshaft and those of two other eights of double The Dictator's price. Notice the smooth roundness of The Dictator graph contrasted with the irregularity, or "humpiness" of the other two.

Finally, Free Wheeling brings to The Dictator its restful travel-ease. Clutch-pushing is almost forgotten. Gears shift noiselessly at any speed. Momentum is put to work, carrying you 10,000 miles for 8,000 miles of engine effort. Gasoline and oil consumption is cut 15% to 20%. Safety is enhanced. Enjoyment is multiplied.

Today—come drive The Dictator, the Eight with "rounded" performance.

BIG SHOTS SEEK RELIEF FROM SALES LOSS

Financial Depression Hits Rum Trade as Canada Imports Drop

By THE MASKED REPORTER

(Copyright 1931, by the Boston Evening American. All rights reserved.)

Al Capone, America's most dominant underworld figure, has been invited to come to Boston by local racketeers.

Not with machine guns and bombs, but in the guise of an efficiency expert.

Capone has been asked to come here as an expert and organize the liquor racket.

He has been asked to lend the magic of his name, and his well known executive ability to the task of putting the local liquor racket in a position where it will pay dividends, to a comparative few.

For some time past the local "Big Shots" have been dissatisfied with the liquor situation.

Like most of the other rackets, it suffered from the financial depression

Sales fell off, with a consequent drop in imports from Canada

Business men who had been accustomed to do considerable entertaining, cut down on their social affairs and reduced their consumption of rye and Scotch accordingly

Others turned to alcohol from which they mixed their own, or took to wine

A great many became interested in the products of a Pacific Coast company which sells grape juice guaranteed to turn into sauterne burgundy and other wines if certain things are done.

Also there were too many people in the liquor racket, with the profits reduced accordingly

BIG BOYS DISSATISFIED

In consequence of all these things the big boys became more and more dissatisfied

They realized there was good money in the racket if it were controlled by a very few men, despite the fact that the great Capone had scorned to come here. He had made the statement there wasn't enough money in the racket in Boston to interest him. Possibly he meant it. On the other hand he may have been misinformed about local conditions

Of course Capone had contacts in Boston as he has in every large city. Liquor is only one of his rackets. One of his first interests outside of liquor, was women, white slave traffic. He has also handled slot machines and various

Out to Sea for Gold Go Divers; Thar's Treasure in Those Waters

CURTIS AND WAHLBORG INSPECT WINCHES, DIVING BELL, IN WHICH DIVERS WORK

Three million dollar prospect. History repeats itself, and in more ways than one, and also in ways that are strange. When gold was discovered in Alaska, thousands flocked to the territory and prospected for gold, finding it in strange places and carrying it to still stranger places with them. On August 15, 1901, the steamer Islander, of the Canadian Pacific Railroad, left Skagway for Juneau, carrying a cargo of three million dollars in gold nuggets and dust, and with 145 passengers aboard. In the dangerous Stevens Passage, about nine miles from its destination, the boat crashed into an iceberg. Seventy-two of the passengers went down with the ship and all the gold was buried in the depths of the seas. The Curtis-Wiley expedition of Seattle, Wash., is after the gold and is equipped with every modern deep sea diving apparatus, to reach the 365-foot depth at which the sunken craft has been located. Frank Curtis, head of the expedition, and John Wahlborg, a member of the expedition, are looking over the forward winches. The Wiley submarine apparatus, or diving bell, is used to place the lines from the winches to the side of the sunken ship. (International Newsreel photos.)

ROOT BEER BOYS ARE CAPTURED

Their taste for root beer led to the arrest of three Dorchester youths, after they had broken into a house at 181 Norfolk st., Dorchester, early today

The trio were surprised by Patrolmen James Murphy and William Buckley as they emerged from the house bearing 24 bottles of root beer, which they had taken from the icebox of Dimetro Scherban who lived in the house

They were charged with breaking and entering and larceny, and gave their names as Robert Gill, 17, of Savin Hill ave, Arthur Roche, 18, of Darling st, and Charles McGee, 17, of Talbot ave., all of Dorchester. They will be arraigned in Dorchester Court today

MYSTERY BOAT AT ALLERTON

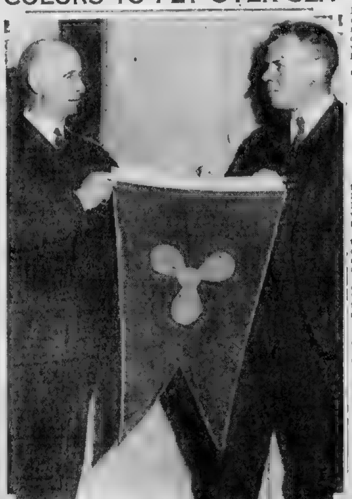

A badly battered 40-foot fishing boat was washed ashore at Allerton last night and figures in another mystery of the sea.

The boat, painted dark green, bears the number C702, and it is through this that coast guards hope to trace its ownership and learn if any lives were lost

It is believed the boat was one of many engaged in fishing just outside Boston harbor, and it may have come to grief yesterday or the day before.

Coast guards were conducting a search in the vicinity today for bodies

POLICE RESCUE FLOOD VICTIMS

The clang of a police patrol at their own front doors was strangely welcomed today by scores of Revere residents who later piled in voluntarily for a ride to the station.

In this case it happened to be the railroad station, and the welcome sign was due to the flooded condition of the North Shore rd. and Revere st. section.

With tide and rain at the level of piazzas, bread winners were "rescued" by the police in many trips of the van and other police cars

Maybe not so welcome were they when they returned to transport children who figured a day off

But the thrill of the gong made up for the disappointment.

WOMAN FAINTS IN 'L' ACCIDENT

One woman fainted and several pasengers were thrown from their seats when a trailer on a Boston Elevated trolley car, bound from Mattapan sq. to Egleston sq. failed to take the switch at Blue Hill ave., Seaver st. and Columbia rd., today. Traffic was tied up 15 minutes

According to the police report, the rear truck of the trailer, instead of taking the switch leading in to Seaver st. at Franklin Park, took the turn into Columbia rd., left the track and stopped on the sidewalk on Blue Hill ave. Buses were sent from the Bartlett st. car house and traffic was diverted to Dudley st. via Columbia rd.

CLERK DIES ON TROLLEY CAR

Samuel S. White, 66, clerk in a Forest Hills shoe store, dropped dead on a West Roxbury-Forest Hills st. car today as it was passing Archdale rd., on Washington st.

White was en route to work from the home of Mrs. Doris E. Anderson of 84 Amherst st., Roslindale, where he made his home. He is survived by another daughter and two sons.

$10,000 Incendiary Fire in Arlington

A fire which police say was incendiary and which was preceded by an explosion, destroyed the three-story wooden dwelling at 220 Park ave., Arlington Heights early today with a loss estimated at $10,000. Two alarms were sounded

Chief of Police Archibald Bullock of Arlington has started an investigation.

Patrolman Edward Sullivan saw the blaze and sounded the first alarm. Neighbors reported an explosion shortly before the blaze was seen.

RUTH CHATTERTON BECOMES WARNER BROS. STAR

Either "Top of the Hill" or "Coal" May Be Her First Picture There

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

LOS ANGELES, June 11—Well, Ruth Chatterton goes to Warner Brothers. That is definite and final. We could collect a few bets on that too for some of my friends insisted I was all wrong.

Louella O. Parsons

When Ruth told me she had never been approached by Paramount with an offer to remain, I believed her. When Darryl Zanuck told me he was looking for stories for Ruth, I believed him and when David Selznick told me that as far as he knew no offers had been made Ruth by Paramount, I believed him.

Two stories have been submitted to Ruth by Warners, "Top of the Hill," the Helen Menken play, and "Coal." Neither of these has been definitely selected as Mr. Zanuck is particularly eager to have Miss Chatterton get just the story she wants. Her first Warner Brothers picture will be made in October.

"EDDIE CUTS IN" is a title that attracted my immediate attention—sounds like an Eddie Cantor comedy, but in reality it is an Eddie Quillan number. Ginger Rogers who has been in "Girl Crazy" in New York all season, has been signed by RKO-Pathe to play the feminine lead opposite Mr. Quillan. Remember, she was the cute little girl who played in Paramount pictures for a time? Al Rogell directs and Robert Armstrong, who, we hear rather definitely, is separated from his wife, Mrs. Jean Armstrong, plays a part. He is back on the RKO-Pathe lot for a year. The Armstrongs are perfectly good friends, but it is just another one of these cases of incompatibility. Separation from her husband means to Mrs. Armstrong a chance to see the world. She goes to the Orient.

Charles Furthman Quits Paramount

CHARLES FURTHMAN, author of "Underworld" and scores of William Powell's Paramount pictures has resigned. Charlie just didn't feel the old place was the same with Bill moved over to Warner Brothers. Besides, summer is here and Santa Monica looks pretty good with its beach and its pleasant ocean. However, Charlie is going to freelance. I am told that there are other resignations due at Paramount from old-timers who refuse to take the cut. However, Mr. Furthman did not resign because of any cut. He resigned because he feels he can do better free-lancing.

OF INTEREST to Hollywood is the good luck that has come to Johnny Mack Brown. Universal, who engaged Johnny to make a serial based on the life of Buffalo Bill, has bought his contract from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. It still had 18 months to run. Johnny has been with M. G. M. since the time he played with the Alabama football team, and he has played opposite some of the most important stars on the M. G. M. lot. Jim Thorpe, another football hero, is also in "Battling With Buffalo Bill." Now that Johnny is one of Universal's own, they are going to give him plenty of jobs. He will also have a part in "The Spirit of Notre Dame" with Lew Ayres.

I HAVE never seen more movie reviewers at one preview than were assembled to see Ross Shattuck's two-reel drama, "Tombstones." Two reels in length, with nary a title, spoken or otherwise, it is as absorbing a drama for a short picture as I have ever seen. Had "Tombstones" been made in Russia, with the synchronization of music so Russian in type and so "arty," we would have every producer bidding frantically for it. The picture is one of the most artistic short ones yet produced. You sit rooted to your seat at the end, waiting for more. "Tombstones" introduces Mr. Shattuck as a producer.

I HAVE BEEN racking my brains to try to remember the play "The Woman in the Case." It is an old one, I know, yet I don't seem to place it. However, Paramount says it has plenty of drama in it and it has been selected as Eleanor Boardman's next picture. Miss Boardman is to be featured and this is only one of the many plays being chosen for her.

BEN LYON and his mother attending the preview of "Night Nurse." BARBARA STANWYCK and JOAN BLONDELL also getting a first glimpse of their film. MARSHALL NEILAN and LOIS MORAN lunching together. ANN HARDING flying to San Francisco. ETHEL LEVEY and the RUPERT HUGHES, all back in town and lunching at the Montmartre. SKEETS GALLAGHER at the former Hi-Hat restaurant at luncheon. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Bowdoin Square

At the cool Bowdoin Square, beginning today, the management provides another highgrade picture program, together with seven vaudeville acts. One of the picture hits is Lew Ayres in "Iron Man." Another picture is "Aloha," where sirens forget all conventions and ensnare their victims. Ben Lyon and Raquel Torres are in the cast. Tomorrow night new vaudeville is added to the bill.

Exeter Theater

Bela Lugosi, in Dracula, and Jack Oakie in June Moon, are the attractions for the remainder of the week at the Exeter.

Operetta Fine Arts Feature

"The Beggar's Opera" will have its Boston premiere next Saturday at the Fine Arts. This operetta is based on John Gay's well-known piece by the same name.

Beginning next Monday, the Fine Arts during the summer months will be open from 1 until 5 p. m. and then close for cleaning and airing, to reopen at 6:30, showing continuously till 11 on week days; while on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays the showings will be continuous from the time of opening.

The Fine Arts, being in the same building with the State Theater, has the advantage of the State's cooling plant that was installed last season at a cost of over $150,000, something no "little" theater could possibly hope to install.

Thelma Todd in Film

Thelma Todd who has a prominent part in "The Maltese Falcon," mystery picture starring Bebe Daniels, opening today at the Olympia and Uptown, was in the midst of her first term as a Massachusetts schoolmarm, when the opportunity came to enter the Paramount School of Acting from which she later graduated.

Miss Todd was born and educated in Lawrence. She is five feet four inches in height, weighs 122 pounds and has blonde hair and blue-gray eyes.

Kay Francis Is Back Again

Kay Francis seems to be eternally caught up in the whirl of big city existence, if her talkie roles are taken as the criterion.

The svelte charmer made her screen hit in "Gentlemen of the Press," with Walter Huston. Since then she has been featured in such stories of metropolitan life as "Raffles" with Ronald Colman; "Street of Chance," "For the Defense" and "Ladies Man" with William Powell—and now in "The Vice Squad" with Paul Lukas, opening at the Metropolitan today.

BOB QUINN DENIES THAT A'S CAN "STEAL" SIGNALS

FANNING

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Swiderski Family. Malcewicz Member. Joe on Mat Tonight.
Paul to Fight Hunt. Fordham's Captains. Harvard's Irishman.

O'Reilly of Boston Quits Georgetown

No wonder Ma Swiderski thinks sport is just the thing,
For Joe's a famous wrestler and Paul is in the ring.
If mother wants a piano—mayhap a brand new hat—
If Paul can't win it fighting, Joe'll get it on the mat!

Tonight and tomorrow events are happening here in Boston which will greatly interest the Swiderskis of the well known Swiderskis of Utica, Syracuse and points up state in New York. It is hard to tell whether the Swiderskis will be more interested in tonight's wrestling match at the Arena between Joe Malcewicz, the Utica Panther, and Howard Cantonwine, the Iowa Thunderbolt, or the ring encounter tomorrow night at Braves Field between Paul Swiderski and elongated Babe Hunt. Malcewicz and Swiderski are brothers-in-law. Joe married into the Swiderski clan when he hitched up with Paul's sister for better or for worse. Between wrestling and boxing, Joe and Paul are kept busy and the mazuma kept rolling into the Swiderski coffers. The radio in the Swiderski domicile is kept working overtime for Swiderski and Malcewicz hop around the map like a couple of trained fleas and Ma Swiderski always is tuning in to find out how Joe or Paul made out.

Malcewicz has been away from his New York home for so long he says he scarcely will recognize it. He just has returned East from an invasion of the Pacific Coast in which he took part in 23 matches. Joe had worked into a championship match with Strangler Lewis in Los Angeles and was training for it when the Strangler had to go and bite himself out of the title.

It was a costly bite for Malcewics. It cost him his title chance. Four years ago, right here at Braves Field, Malcewicz wrestled Lewis to a four-hour draw. Joe says he has been coming while Lewis has been going and is now sure he can pin the Strangler's shoulders to the mat. Joe is pointing for a championship match with Henri DeGlane, now. If he should throw Cantonwine tonight, it will be one step nearer the championship chance.

Swiderski is just as confident of beating Babe Hunt as his brother-in-law is of defeating Cantonwine. The New York Commission thinks so much of Swiderski that the commissioners accepted Swiderski's challenge of Jack Sharkey. Harry Lenny is around town bellowing he has $25,000 to hand Sharkey the minute the Squire agrees to step into the same ring with the Punching Pole. But no one has seen the money yet.

"During the last year," orates Lenny, "Swiderski has beaten King Levinsky and Frank Simms in Chicago, George Hoffman in Tulsa, Babe Hunt in Oklahoma City and Ralph Ficucelli in Madison Square Garden. He knocked out Joe Banovic in Syracuse, Pietro Corri in Oklahoma City and Chuck Burns in Rochester. He'll stop Babe Hunt at Braves Field, and right here in Sharkey's back yard prove to Boston fans he is worthy of a match with the Big I Man from Chestnut Hill. Swiderski already has plastered Mickey Walker, who I understand is matched with Sharkey in New York. Sharkey can't avoid my man much longer."

Yes, Harry, Swiderski did beat Walker on Derby Eve at Louisville. But what did Mickey do to Paul when he got Swiderski in a return match? It seems to me that Mickey hit Paul with almost everything except the ring posts. And while you're talking about Swiderski knocking out Banovic, here's an epistle from Jersey Jones with newspaper clippings showing the referee stopped the bout because of Banovic getting a cut eye after Joe had taken all of the rounds. There are two sides to every story.

Two Boston boys, John "Tip" Tobin and John "Jack" Fisher, have the unique honor of being elected co-captains of the Fordham baseball team. It is the first time the Maroon ever has chosen two captains. Tobin is the son of Larry Tobin and lives on Prince st., Jamaica Plain. Larry is the head of the big Embassy Club at Miami. Fisher was Everett high's star quarterback before going to Fordham.

Tobin and Fisher are inseparable pals. Fisher is supposed to be the best fielding shortstop in collegiate ranks. Tobin is Fordham's chief slugger. This season "Tip" has batted .381. The two Bostonians both play varsity football for Fordham as well as baseball. Fisher is a star quarterback and Tobin plays end.

After 17 years with Georgetown, John D. O'Reilly has resigned as track and field coach, and the Blue and Gray now is casting around for a new track and field mentor. O'Reilly is a Bostonian, born and bred. He broke into the coaching game here as coach at Boston English. Few coaches ever made as brilliant a record as did O'Reilly at Georgetown. O'Reilly will not be long out of a coaching berth.

Once in a blue moon you see an Irishman on a Harvard crew. The last time Harvard beat Yale the eight was steered and exhorted to victory by Coxswain Sullivan. This year Harvard has another Irishman on the crew, Gerard Cassedy of Cambridge. And the hunch players are going down hook, line and sinker on the Crimson to beat the Blue in their coming aquatic duel. An Irishman in the boat is as good as a darky in the woodpile to the hunch players.

It looks like old times to see Bucky Harris cavorting around the keystone sack at Fenway Park. Bucky hasn't played second base in three years. Gehringer's injury forced the Detroit manager into harness again and he accredited himself commendably. But Bucky himself knows that he is no Gehringer. The Tigers will suffer as long as "Gerry" is out of the lineup.

SAYS MOUND STARS HIDE DELIVERIES

By JOE CASHMAN

That old story, about the ability of the Philadelphia Athletics to steal signals, is being revived.

While the Macks were the rulers of the baseball universe from 1910 to 1914, it was openly charged by rivals that the success of the club was due to Outfielder Danny Murphy's uncanny knowledge of what deliveries were being signalled for by opposing catchers.

The phenomenal success of the champions in winning games by late-inning rallies this season has caused the same charge, with a few new twists, to be brought against them.

Now, according to the plaintiffs, Coach Eddie Collins is the guilty party and he gains his information by studying the mannerisms of enemy pitchers.

After four or five innings of careful watching, Collins can, it is claimed, call beforehand the brand of every ball pitched by the actions of the flinger under observation.

Then, if necessary, he hands down the information to his mates, and they proceed to win the ball game.

If this interesting yarn is true, our Red Sox pitchers must be by far the smartest in the league for the best the A's could do on their last visit to town was split even in four games.

But Bob Quinn refuses to give his pitchers credit for having been especially brainy against the A's. The Fenway "prexy" for one believes that the indictment against the A's is the bunk.

Quinn Unable to "Call" Pitches

"I was always considered pretty good at picking up enemy signals," said he this morning, "but so cleverly does the average pitcher cover up what he is going to throw and the average catcher hide what he is calling for these days that from my box up on the roof, where it is much easier to see what is going on down on the diamond, I have been unable to call a pitch correctly all season.

"There may be a few young pitchers around who give away what they are going to throw and Collins may be able to call the turn on these, but don't let anyone tell you that he knows what veteran hurlers are going to toss up next.

"Furthermore, if Collins did know, I don't think it would help the A's any. Ball players in the old days were glad to know signals but the average player today hasn't enough courage to accept a sign when he goes to bat.

"It is a dangerous practice, you know. A pitcher might get wise that a batter knew what was coming and without giving any indication throw a fast ball when he intended to throw a curve and the batter would probably get 'beaned.' Modern players don't want to take this chance.

"There is nothing remarkable about the A's showing. With Grove, Earnshaw, Walberg, Cochrane, Foxx, Miller and Simmons, the Macks could win with blind men on the coaching lines.

"Give us those players and we could give our signals away and play without coaches and still win."

Manager Stanley "Bucky" Harris of the Detroit Tigers agrees with Quinn.

Harris Says Moundmen Keep Pitches Secret

He has just come from Philadelphia, where his charges were whipped four games in a row by the champions, and ought to know.

"It would be a good alibi," said "Bucky" when questioned, "but it wouldn't be true. My pitchers don't tip off what they are going to throw. Neither do any of the flingers on other clubs that I have seen.

"The A's won because they were the better ball club in that engagement. I don't see anything significant in the fact that the A's staged some late-game rallies against us. If Collins could steal signals, the best time to take advantage of his knowledge would be at the start of a game. The seventh and eighth innings are sometimes too late."

Harris welcomed the rain which halted the opener of the Sox-Tigers series.

"Every day we have off now helps us," he said, "for it will be about a week more before Gehringer and Alexander will be able to return to the lineup, and without these two players we are in a rather bad way."

CHAPIN CANOE RACE CHOICE

Howard Chapin of Waltham, a member of the Omicron Delta Association, is a favorite to repeat his victory of 1930 in the 20-mile canoe Marathon held by the Samoset Canoe Club June 21, at West Roxbury.

Chapin's record in canoe racing is brilliant.

Jerry Mosher of the Crescent Canoe Club, winner of this race in 1927 and 1929 is expected to make things interesting for Chapin. Mosher holds one leg of the former Gov. Alvan T. Fuller trophy which went into competition in 1928.

Forty entries have already been received for this Marathon.

FRED SPENCER IN PACED RACE

Local bike followers are overlooking one star, Freddy Spencer, former king of sprinters, who is riding his second year behind the motors.

Freddy was a sprint star.

Then he went after money as a pace follower. Fans have been forgetting that it takes a year to get used to following a motor.

Saturday he faces one of the great riders, Franco Georgetti, present American champion; Al Letournier, Caesar DeBaets and Franz Duelberg.

Bruno Laura, Peter Calise, Al Keith and Joe McGann have been signed for the 10-mile motor paced event.

MALCEWICZ, CANTONWINE IN ARENA MAT GO

PANTHER IS OUTWEIGHED 40 POUNDS

By JACK CONWAY

Joe Malcewicz, Panther of the Mat, will once more attempt to prove that weight over 190 pounds does not mean a thing when he springs at Howard Cantonwine, Iowa Thunderbolt, in their finish bout, best two falls out of three, at the Arena tonight, under the direction of Paul Bowser.

Malcewicz was never particular as to how big his opponents were. Like old Bob Fitz, he has remarked the bigger they are the harder they fall.

Joe never scales more than 190 pounds, and yet he has tossed some of the Man Mountains of the mat around with the same ease that a youngster displays in hurling a baseball.

Cantonwine, weighing 230 pounds, says he will prove that the Panther's theory is wrong. He maintains that he will match his speed against his rivals and that his superior weight and strength will enable him to win.

Jack Conway

"Malcewicz has done well against big fellows because most of them have been slow," said Cantonwine. "His speed and skill have enabled him to offset the other fellow's extra weight.

"I think I'm as fast as the Panther. And with a weight advantage of more than 30 pounds I feel quite sure I shall win."

Browning and Komar in the Semifinal

Jim Browning of Missouri, who has become a favorite with the fans as a result of his scissor body scissors, will have Joe "Bull Komar as an opponent in the semifinal. Komar is one of the toughest of the old line wrestlers and will furnish sturdy opposition for Browning.

"Bonnie" Muir of Australia, who made a hit at the Arena last week by the way he polished off Pat McKay, will get tangled up with Boris Demetroff, Bulgarian champion, in another bout. Muir is one of the best action wrestlers to show here this season.

Jake Patterson of Syracuse and "Buck" Weaver of the University of Chicago, will also appear on the card. Patterson will oppose Al Mercier, former baseball player, while Weaver will collide with John Spellman of Brown.

Karol Zbyszko will take on Joe Shimkus, Farmer George McLeod will collide with Louis Loew, while Pinkley Gardner will go into action against Joe Cross.

Londos Out to Keep Boston Slate Clean

Jim Londos will try to continue his run of mat victories in Boston when he collides with Tiny Roebuck, Indian wrestler, in a one fall bout to a finish at the Boston Garden on next Monday night.

Londos has won five contests in Boston this season and is of the opinion he will add Roebuck to his list of victims. A defeat would prove costly to Londos as he is matched to take on Ray Steele for the Milk Fund in New York on June 29.

Wilson and Morgan in British Finals

Portmarnock, Ireland, June 11 (AP)—Enid Wilson, English champion, and Wanda Morgan, also of England, tomorrow will play for the British ladies' golf title. Miss Wilson today defeated Mrs. R. Greenlees of Scotland three and one and Miss Morgan won from Molly Gourlay by one hole in the semifinals.

Cantab Cubs Play Sinclair Post Nine

Jack Conway Picks Malcewicz to Win Bout

Jack Conway today picked Joe Malcewicz to win from Howard Cantonwine in their finish mat bout at the Arena tonight.

"I have long considered Malcewicz one of the greatest wrestlers in the world," said Jack. "Watch the Panther spring tonight. He won 23 straight bouts on the Coast and is ready for another victory."

Conway's 1931 record follows:

W	L	P.C.

THEIR FAVORITE HOLDS

JOE MALCEWICZ and HOWARD CANTONWINE meet on the mat in the Arena tonight. Above you see CANTONWINE gripping a wrestling mate in his favorite hold, the double arm bar. With that hold he hopes to win tonight. But MALCEWICZ has different views. Joe hopes to win with the flying mare. To the right you see MALCEWICZ whirling an opponent in the air with the sensational hold. It looks easy. All you have to do is to grasp an opponent around the head, turn and heave him over your shoulder. Simple, isn't it, Agnes? If you know how.

Horse Racing Filthy Game Now

New York, June 11—Back in 1919, following the crooked World's Series, our national sport was given a thorough housecleaning. Judge Landis was brought off the federal bench and placed in charge. The baseball moguls' far-sightedness saved the game.

Today thoroughbred racing in New York State is in the same position baseball was in 1919. Joseph E. Widener and his associates should take a leaf from baseball's book and scour the racing game thoroughly. How it needs cleansing!

Fixed races, thieving bookmakers, poor finish judging and tpits are just a few things that Mr. Widener might investigate.

The facsimile of the envelope, enclosed in which was a bum tip printed at the top of this column, shows just how far the professional tout will go to entrap the innocent horse player. This "Tom Thorpe" is not the "Tom Thorp" who handicaps exclusively for the New York Evening Journal. But "Thorp of the N. Y. Evening Journal," who picks more winners than any other newspaper handicapper, is a good name; hence the tout decides that "Tom Thorpe's" selections, selling for one dollar, will bring him a nice profit.

Don't spend any more dollar bills for these phony baloney tips. This "Thorpe" probably is a piano-maker and doesn't know a horse from a kangaroo.

When Mr. Widener is not too busy he should give his placing officials the North and South. Last week they called wrong two races that were not even close. Danour beat Morstone a long neck, and Bathorse was nearly half a length in front of Instigator. Yet up went the numbers of Morstone and Instigator.

Now for the deal the bookmakers are giving the innocent players. At random we selected last Tuesday's races to figure the percentage the layers have over the suckers. In the second race that day the books were a 136 per cent proposition. The first race was a 126 per cent affair. It's hard enough to pick a winner in these days when fixed races are not uncommon, but when you have to take 36 and 26 per cent the worst of it—well, you simply "ain't got no chance a'tall."

"Sport Truths" will be a regular feature on these pages. Praise will be given where praise is deserved. Criticism—severe criticism—will be forthcoming when it is called for. No friend will get the best of it in this column, nor enemy the worst of it.

JACK SHARKEY TRAINS FOR WALKER GO

By RINGSIDE

Leslie Baker, Watertown welterweight, will have plenty of rooters when he steps into action against Werter Arcelli, Italian lightweight, in a 10-round bout at an Argonne A. A. show at Braves Field tomorrow night.

Since turning pro, Baker has been winning steadily. He is a good boxer, while he hits well with each hand.

Arcelli has 23 straight wins to his credit, and will probably go to the post a favorite.

Paul Sotiarski, punching Polish heavyweight, and Babe Hunt of Oklahoma, who collide in the final ten-rounder, have finished training. Each predicts he will win by a kayo.

Rosy Rosales of Cleveland and George Nichols of Buffalo will let 'em big punches fly in the other ten.

Sharkey Starts Training for Walker Bout

Jack Sharkey, American heavyweight champion, has started training for a title defense match against Mickey Walker, which will be staged at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, on July 22 under the direction of the Milk Fund and Jimmy Johnson. Sharkey will do his preliminary work at Toland's Gym.

The signing of contracts for the Sharkey-Walker bout will be delayed until after Walker has been reinstated in New York. Chairman Farley of the New York Athletic Commission recently informed Mrs. Hearst that the scions would reinstate Walker for a Milk Fund show provided Sharkey would consent to meet him.

Johnny Buckley, acting for Sharkey, came to terms with Jimmy Johnston of the Dodger A. C. and Damon Runyon. The latter acted for the Milk Fund.

Ernie Schaaf Returns to Hub Gym

Ernie Schaaf, accompanied by Al Lacy, returned to Boston after a flying trip to New York. Schaaf went over to the big town for a ten-round bout with Jack Gagnon which is the semi-final to the Carnera-Redmond tussle. When the deluge came, Jimmy Johnston put his show over until next Monday night.

Schaaf will work out at Toland's and will return to New York on Sunday. Jack Sharkey and Johnny Buckley will make the trip to New York with the New England heavyweight champion.

Maloney-Schaaf Bout Is Still Hanging Fire

Following a week spent in conference between Matchmaker Billy Ahearn, Dan Carroll and Johnny Buckley, the proposed return bout between Jim Maloney and Ernie Schaaf is still hanging fire. The Garden is anxious to stage the contest on July 16, but has been unable to come to terms with Carroll and Buckley.

Eddie Mack of the Argonne Club has also put in a bid for the bout. Mack would like to stage the show at Braves Field.

Jake Zeramby Opens Fire on Fuller and Callahan

Jake Zeramby, with six straight wins to his credit, has opened fire on Sammy Fuller and Andy Callahan. The flashy Lynn lightweight believes he would be able to outscore both of these men. Zeramby has shown remarkable improvement in his boxing and punching and looks as if he is going a long way up the fistic trail. Jack is only 21 years of age with his future still ahead of him.

George Manley Eager to Show in Hub

George Manley, Denver lightheavyweight, who recently knocked out K. O. Christner and then outscored Maxie Rosenbloom, is anxious to show his wallop to Boston fans. Furthermore, Manley is prepared to meet all comers. He's a first-class fighter and would go good here.

VACANT SEAT IN TECH SHELL

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 11 (AP)—Between the customary crop of last-minute injuries and Coach Bill Haines' uncertainty as to the No. 6 oar in his Massachusetts Tech varsity eight, college crew coaches are finding plenty of worries in the last few days before the Intercollegiate Rowing Association regatta next Tuesday.

The vacancy in the M. I. T. shell was made when Louis Evans resigned, and although Jack Regan seems to have the call, rowing at No. 6 in yesterday's time trials, Haines still is considering Cy Hapgood for the post.

Byron Gower, bow in one of Syracuse's two varsity eights, the Lombardi stroked combination developed a kink in his back yesterday and was unable to row.

Coach Ten Eyck was uncertain as to when he might recover. The ailment is similar to the attack of lumbago that kept Milt Weiler, varsity stroke, out of the boat for two weeks. The Cornell freshman eight also had to be rearranged yesterday when Williams, regular No. 5, was kept out of action by a boil on his right knee.

Coach Wray was not certain whether he would be able to row June 16. Blunt was moved from No. 3 to No. 5 to fill the gap, Pond replacing him.

Pete Donahue Signs Up With Indians

Cleveland, June 11 (AP)—Pete Donahue, veteran pitcher, released by the New York Giants, has been signed by the Cleveland Indians and will join them shortly.

Billy Evans, general manager of the Indians, who announced signing Donahue, said he probably will be used chiefly as a relief hurler.

DIAMOND DUST

Ed Brandt and Bill Hallahan, two of the greatest southpaws in captivity, will duel in the second game of the Braves-Cardinals series in St. Louis this afternoon.

The champions are one of two clubs in the league that the Tribal ace hasn't beaten this season, and he is anxious to start another winning streak at their expense. He will certainly deserve the verdict if he gains it, for they don't make better pitchers than Hallahan.

The first game of the series, and incidentally, the first meeting of the rivals this season, found the Warriors emerging from their recent slump and winning 13 to 4. The victory increased their lead over the fifth place Robins, who lost to the Reds, to 2½ games.

Manger Gabby Street sent Paul Derringer, one of his rookies, to the hill against Old Tom Zachary. The kid went into the fifth frame with a 3 to 1 lead, but the Tribesmen scored eleven runs in the next three innings, to give their ancient southpaw his fifth win of the season. Wally Berger and Chick Hafey hit home runs during the afternoon.

That rumor about Washington having agreed in trade Irving "Bump" Hadley and Jackie Hayes to the Yankees for Tony Lazzeri is hard to believe.

Hadley is one of the best righthanded flingers in baseball and Hayes is a mighty good utility fielder, while Lazzeri, once the greatest of second basemen, has been going so poorly that he was benched a few days ago in favor of Joe Sewell, who a veteran of 13 campaigns rated all through by the Indians last winter.

If Lazzeri goes to the Senators, it will probably mean the benching of "Buddy" Myer, who has been guarding the keystone sack in the capital regularly since he was traded by the Red Sox at the close of the 1928 season. Myer would look mighty sweet in a Red Sox uniform again.

Wonder why the Braves let Pete Donahue get out of the circuit? He appears as good a prospect as Ray Moss, who was grabbed from Brooklyn on waivers recently.

BEST 'CHASE' JOCKEYS TO RIDE HERE

By GEORGE GRIMM

Great racing is in prospect at Brookline, June 17 and 20, under the management of the Eastern Horse Club. The entries of 112 horses for a total of 257 nominations were announced this morning by Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., chairman of the board of stewards.

The strength of this great entry lies in the fact that all the horses are fit, which means big fields in each of the 12 races on the two-day program at the historic Clyde Pack course.

With the horses will come the leading steeplechase jockeys of the country, including George H. "Pete" Bostwick, the great rider considered in England and America as the foremost amateur of the day.

Such horses as Annapolis, winner of the Billy Barton; Moholi, Le Digard, Princess Clovelly, Grenadier Guard, Herman, Isolatest, 2d, Cald, Boniface, Galloping Souvenir, Kiang, Perporino, Hot Brain, Crumpler, Flag of, Fashion, Canterbury, Land Boy, Lunar and Gormond are included in the big entry.

New 'Chase Course Gives All Chance to See Races

Another reason for a successful meet lies in the new steeplechase course. More horses will go over it than ever before as it is easier than the old one. The jumps have been placed so that each one will be in full view of every spectator, with the famous water jump directly in front of the grandstand.

This new course is bound to prove popular. In the past spectators had to rush from one vantage point to another to see a full race. Now person can stand in the infield and see the horses take every obstacle.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

Solid footing is desirable when exploding from a trap. Get your stance, then wedge your heels down into the sand until your feet hit something that feels solid. You cannot expect to make this shot which calls for close limits with your feet slipping and sloshing around in loose sand. The ball should be back rather than forward. Have it about midway between your body and your feet rather close together. It would be better to have the ball nearer the right foot than toward the left if you alter from the midway position. In this shot your blade does not strike the ball at any time. It cuts into the sand, squeezes and compresses the sand, and that forces underneath the ball, makes the ball jump upward and out. Often a nibblickful of sand will float with the ball, until the ball strikes the green. On the back swing go straight back more than toward in back of you. Strike directly downward just back of the ball and go right in and clear through with your club. If you hit into the sand this way, have no fear about the ball going too far. It does that only when you hit the ball, not the sand.

BOSTON WOMEN GOLFERS BEATEN BY QUAKERS

PHILADELPHIA WINS 10 OF 15 MATCHES

Roslyn, L. I., June 11 (AP)—With a well-balanced team, one that contained three former national champions on its rolls, Philadelphia defeated Boston in the first inter-city match of the series for the GGriscom cup at the Engineers' Country Club today. The score was ten matches to five.

The first eight players on the Philadelphia team clinched the victory for their side, all of them winning their matches, although in all but one instance their Boston opponents gave them a hard fight. The exception was Miss Jane McCullough, 19-year-old Huntington Valley star, who scored a 7 and 6 victory over Miss Frances Stebbins.

Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, leader of the Philadelphia team, gave her teammates a good example by taking the measure of Miss Rosamond Vahey, the Massachusetts State champion, 2 and 1, and from there on it was a landslide that was not checked until Mrs William Quimby scored a victory over Miss Rugh Perry of Philadelphia.

Miss Edith Quier, Mrs. C. H. Vanderbeck, former national titleholder; Miss Frances Williams, winner of the Eastern title last year; Mrs. H. B. Stetson, Mrs. P. L. Corson, Miss McCullough and Mrs. Conyers Button all won their matches and althrough the last half of the Boston team was stronger than the lower half on the Philadelphia side the victory was by then assured.

Miss Dorothy Hunter Scores a Victory

Of the five Boston victories one was scored by Miss Dorothy Hunter of Albemarle, the State Junior champion.

Miss Vahey gave Mrs. Hurd a much harder match than the veteran expected, and not until the match neared the end was the result decided. With three holes left to play, Miss Vahey was all square with her noted opponent. Out in 4, Mrs. Hurd was only 1 up. She won the tenth with a 4, when the Bay State champion drove out of bounds, becoming 2 up, but Miss Vahey brought the match to even terms by winning the 13th hole with a birdie 4 and the 15th with a par 5.

Miss Vahey Has Tough Luck on Two Holes

On two holes, the sixth and the twelfth, Miss Vahey pitched into the hole with her niblick, but in each instance the ball jumped out and she missed putts of less than two yards to either halve or win the hole. It probably was those two breaks that cost her the match.

The cards:

Mrs. Hurd—Out	5 6 6 4 5 4 5 4 6—45
Miss Vahey—Out	5 6 5 6 5 5 6 3 6—47
Mrs. Hurd—In	4 5 5 5 6 3 5 5
Miss Vahey—In	5 5 5 4 3 5 5 6

Mrs. H. B. Stetson, former national champion, and Mrs. Helen Payson Corson of Philadelphia virtually clinched the victory for Philadelphia when they returned 2 and 1 scores over Mrs. Henri Prunart, Jr., and Miss Margaret Curtis, another former national champoin. These victories brought the count up to seven straight victories for the Philadelphia team.

Jane McCullough of Huntington Valley defeated Miss Frances Stebbins, 7 and 6, adding another point to the Philadelphia total.

Miss Frances Williams of Lehigh, Pa., winner of the Eastern championship last year, made the count 8 to 0 against Boston by defeating Miss Grace English, 2 and 1, after a great uphill fight. Miss Williams was 3 down at one time during the early stages of the match, but overtook her rival and clinched the match by getting a great 3 on the 17th hole.

The former national champion, Mrs. C. H. Vanderbeck, No. 3 Philadelphia player, won from Miss Dorothy Richards of Boston, 3 and 2.

Kirkwood Wins His Second Prize

Deauville, France, June 11 (AP)—Joe Kirkwood, who finished seventh in the French Open Golf championship yesterday, returned to the Deauville links today to score a 72 and take second place at the end of the first round of the 36 hole competition for the Mastbaum cup and prizes amounting to 50,000 francs (about $2000).

"Hawky" Weiner Is New Malden Captain

Harold "Hawky" Weiner was elected captain of the Malden high baseball team for next year. Weiner played second base and had a batting average of .428. He was a sensation in the field, making but three errors all season.

GOVERNOR ELY WELCOMES GAELIC GLADIATORS

The All-Ireland Gaelic football team, which is on an invasion of the United States and Canada, was officially received at the State House by Governor Joseph B. Ely today. Here you see the visiting Gaels in the Hall of Flags.

GOV. GREETS GAELIC TEAM

Twenty-two members of the All-Ireland champion football team which has been touring the country meeting all-star teams were received today by Gov. Ely at the State House.

The players were presented to the Governor by former Senator Patrick J. Melody of Boston and Senator Joseph Finnegan of Dorchester.

Gov. Ely expressed regret that he would be unable to attend the game at Russell Field in Cambridge next Sunday. The Governor presented the captain of the team, John J. Sheehy, with an autographed photograph.

The team sails for home on June 27. The players expressed keen satisfaction on meeting the Governor and of being able to visit the "Dublin" of America, refuge for many "exiles" of their race.

GOV. ELY CAPT. JOHN SHEEHY

Here is Governor Ely handing John Joe Sheehy, captain of the All-Irelands, Boston's official welcome. The Gaels will throw out skirmishing lines against the Massachusetts All-Stars at Russell Field, North Cambridge, on Sunday afternoon.

Cuban Champ Gets Acid Test Tonight

Chicago, June 11 (AP)—Relampo Saguero, Cuba's latest pride of the ring, gets another hard test tonight when he meets the rugged Tug Phillips of Pittsburgh in the main 10-round battle at Mills Stadium.

The Cuban welterweight champion, victor in 71 out of 75 bouts was favored to win, although Phillips is expected to give him an extremely busy and dangerous evening. Phillips, a Canadian booked out of Pittsburgh, has dropped but two decisions in two years, winning 36 fights and drawing in another.

Ryan to Manage Richmond Club

Richmond, Va., June 11 (AP) Ray Ryan, former business manager of the Richmond Eastern League Club, was appointed today by Charles A. Somma, recent purchaser of the club franchise, to succeed Fred C (Cy) Williams as bench manager of the team.

Somma said the appointment of Ryan is for a trial period. In announcing the release of Williams and the appointment of Ryan, Somma said a new manager might raise Richmond from the cellar position.

Twixt Tee and Cup

—By BILL GRIMES

Among the British Ryder Cup team, which plays at Winchester one week from tomorrow, there will be the only two English professionals who have won the British open since the war, George Duncan and Arthur G. Havers.

The local amateurs who will pair up with the visiting Ryder cup players at Winchester were selected by the M. G. A., and on performances this season that august body overlooked a player whose golf has overshadowed that of practically every amateur in the states. Reference is made to Charlie Eaton, a former junior champion of the state.

With the possible exception of Francis Ouimet, and even he must be at his best, there is no amateur in this section who has been as consistently low at Winchester this spring as Charlie Eaton.

The 10th annual New England Senior Golfers' Association championship will wind up today at Woodland, weather permitting. The second day's play was postponed despite the fact that the rain was not as copious as on Tuesday when 107 members played.

The opening day of the Arlmont Golf Club open was ruined by the adverse weather condition of yesterday.

The annual Thorny Lea and Sharon tournaments start today and will continue through Saturday. C. Searles Reed, the annual winner of the Thorny Lea event is all primed to again lead the field despite the new opposition expected at the Brockton club on Saturday, in the form of Jesse Guilford and Emery Stratton.

H. C. Jolly, who was an alternate on the last Ryder cup team that came to this country, withdrew this year after being honored with a berth.

Manager Art Ross of the Boston Bruins, who is also a member of the M. G. A. tournament committee will return here from Montreal next week to remain all summer. Ross is recovering from a severe attack of the flu and therefore will not play any great amount of golf for a few weeks.

The National Hockey League golf tournament, originally scheduled for next Monday has been put over one week. Dutch Gainor, Cooney Weiland and Bob Taylor are planning to go to Montreal for this tournament.

Perley Chase, the diminutive veteran from the Winchester Country Club, predicts a bright future for Eddie Peterson of Oakley. In the four ball matches Tuesday, which were played in one of the heaviest dowpours in years, Peterson, who is only 18 years of age, was 73 on his own ball.

Bill Platt, the sage of Woodland in the art of rectifying golf swings has taken his clubmate, Tommy McInerney, under his tutelage. Tommy developed a hitch at the top of his swing this spring which he has been unable to iron out but Prof. Platt has guaranteed to cure this ailment.

Donie Bush Puts Lue Blue on Block

Chicago, June 11 (AP)—Donie Bush is so mixed up with his player talent that he may end it all by making some trades.

First and second base are his most important of many problems. Lew Fonseca, recently acquired from Cleveland is showing signs of wearing out at second base; but Lue Blue, obtained last spring from St. Louis, is playing the first bag so well that Donie doesn't like to bench him.

Al Thomas, a pitcher, who hasn't rounded to form, and Outfielder Cary Reynolds, who has been ill much of the season, are wanted by other clubs. If Donie can swing a satisfactory deal, he may do so.

Salmon Leap Wins Newbury Cup Race

Newbury, Eng., June 11 (AP)—Mrs. Arthur James' Salmon Leap at 3½ to 1 today won the Newbury Summer Cup Handicap from a field of nine other horses. Truncheon was second and Prince Paradise third. The race, first run in 1906, is worth about $7500.

EX-STARS OF NOTRE DAME AT DINNER

University of Notre Dame Club of Boston is to hold an informal stag dinner at the Boston Yacht Club, Rowe's Wharf, Saturday evening.

The annual election of officers will be conducted.

Congressman William J. Granfield of Springfield will be the honored guest of the evening. The congressman played basketball for three years at Notre Dame and was captain in his senior year. He also played third base on the baseball team and after his graduation went to the Cincinnati Reds. The girl he married, however, objected to his playing professional baseball, so severing his connections with Cincinnati, he began the practice of law.

The guest speaker of the evening will be Adam Walsh, present Yale coach and former captain and center of the famous "Four Horsemen" team of '24. Jim Dooley, an outstanding guard and team mate of the immortal George Gipp has accepted the invitation to be the toastmaster.

Past President of the Alumni Association Bill Higgins, Boston attorney, one time star pitcher at the university, will be present.

Eddie Collins, City of Boston legislative council, first manager of athletics at Notre Dame and who laid plans for future successes of Notre Dame teams; Luke Kelley, who played tackle and captained the first championship team at Notre Dame in '11 and Pete Dwyer, who played the other tackle with Luke and is now coach at Syracuse, have also signified their intentions of being with the boys.

For reservations call Joseph A. Gartland Jr. at Liberty 7300.

WHY NOT MARRY? HUSBAND A NECESSITY TO WOMAN

By HELEN ROWLAND

"MARRIAGE," says the Hard-Boiled, "has not only ceased to be woman's Highest Career. It is not a 'career,' at all; but just an incident or an accident—and usually a mistake!"

Nonsense and tommyrot! The first essential to a man's happiness—and above all, to a woman's—is a LIFE-COMPANION! And no job, no profession, no mission, no art—not even a pair of prize Pekingese will take the place of a husband!

HELEN ROWLAND.

In the name of honesty, let us admit it! A husband is exactly what he always has been and always will be—the permanent necessity of a woman's life. The primary working-foundation for happiness and self-development—the sine qua non of success! The theme, the title-page and the climax of her life-story!

Even when a girl does not plan to begin her "career" by annexing a husband, she subconsciously plans to END it that way. Even though a man may struggle against marriage to the last ditch, he is somehow glad and relieved when the struggle is over and he feels the anaesthetic of domesticity creeping over him.

A woman MUST have something human to cling to, worry about, brag about, idealize and manage—something to mother, yearn over, appeal to and command. Somebody human to OWN!

A lover is merely a luxury; a husband is a necessity—useful in so many ways as the latest electrical device and far more decorative. Even with a tombstone over him, he affords you a sort of social prestige and self-complacency that a spinster is denied.

What if he does require the sacrifice of a few laurels, illusions, comforts, pet habits, closet-hooks and ideas on "individualism"? Isn't he worth the price?

As for a man without a woman to chide him and believe in him, he is like a motorcar without a safety-clutch, a barge without a tugboat, a watch without a regulator. Marriage—even marriage to the wrong woman—is the MAKING of him!

The average "single-footer" either settles down into a soggy state of gloom, lasiness and self-indulgence or keeps running around in circles trying to find out what's the matter with him. He never GETS anywhere! Marriage puts a man's feet on the earth and his nose to the grindstone—and turns him from a drone or a butterfly into a Solid Citizen!

Most of the illustrious names that have come down to us through history have been those of distinguished husbands. What did Adam ever do—except fill the role of husband to Eve!

Be as snappily cynical about marriage as you will. It may be a bore, a joy or a joke—but it is still the Alpha and Omega of existence. And, without it all else is dead sea fruit!

Keep in Step as the Years Roll By

By WINIFRED BLACK

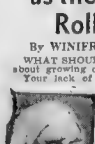

WHAT SHOULD you hate most about growing old?

Your lack of vigor, your impaired health, your grieving for those who are gone?

Yes, they are all bad things, but what I should hate is getting out of step.

There's something so hateful in being out of step.

Did you ever go away some where for a long visit, and find somebody in your favorite chair at the tea table?

Winifred Black

Somebody very nice and sweet, and interesting—but Somebody Else?

And did the people at the table talk about people you didn't know, and hum songs you never heard and laugh at jokes you couldn't quite understand, and did you feel all at once—alone—like someone standing on a bridge in the dark with the black water mourning along underneath, and a dog howling way off somewhere, wishing somebody would come home and say "Hello, Tige."

And when you are serious they want to laugh, and when you want to laugh they look sulky; when you are indignant they grin.

Oh, they're polite and kind, but every once in a while you catch a look on somebody's face which says: "I wonder how long she's going to stay."

Didn't you hate that—being just "She" when people are talking of you?

Yes, I think I should hate loneliness worst of all.

Poverty is a poor companion.

Cold is c hateful thing.

Hunger is cruel—but you can bear any of these things if you have someone to bear them with you—can't you?

I do admire the plucky Modernswho go to live in little apartments, all by themselves,, and keep smiling.

I know it's the way to do—but, dear me, I'd rather be poor and very humble indeed, and have those I love around me, than to be a poor lonesome Queen all in velvet and diamonds, and nobody to tell me whether my crown was on straight or not wouldn't you?

Larry Has Talk With Delight

AFTER LORRIMER had left the room Delight lay back against the pillows and tried to think her way out. There was no doubt that she was tempted. Terribly tempted. She admitted as much to herself. Why hadn't Mary Lou stayed and fought it out with her? Why had she run away? "Running," thought Delight, "in this case running away took more courage. All she had to do was stay and say nothing and let him look at both of us." She smiled, very bitterly, having no illusions. "But now that she has run away," said Delight to herself, "she's left me a clear field. Well, comparatively clear; I'd be a fool not to take advantage of it. But then, I've always been a fool."

Before dinner Larry Mitchell arrived. His arrival was a condition which strongly resembled excitement, for Jenny, meeting him at the station that afternoon, had, of course, told him the whole story of her encounter with Mary Lou.

"She said she'd keep in touch with us. But she won't. Where has she gone?" Jenny demanded frantically. "What will she do? Larry, we must find her; she's breaking her heart over Travers and this idiotic woman, whoever she is. And it's all your fault! To think that I have promised to marry such an unmitigated imbecile!" cried Jenny, very much upset.

"Check!" agreed Larry, as disturbed as she. "But how could I know that Mary Lou, darn her, would spill the complicated beans? I tell you, Jenny, I was blamed near insane keeping the whole business to myself, but I couldn't. You see the situation had to be cleared up sooner or later. Mary Lou couldn't go on pretending to the end of time. She couldn't keep stalling Lorrimer until all of us were gray and you and I had our pinyful grandchildren around our rheumatic knees—"

"You take a lot for granted!" sniffed Jenny. But she smiled.

"Sure I do. That's the only way to get along in this life," quoth the unabashed Larry. "But don't worry, honey, I'll take a jaunt out to Oakdale. She'll go there, I'm sure. I'll take her and shake her—"

"And bring her back to me!" ordered Jenny. "she needn't go to Westwood House. She can see Aunt Margaret here. She needn't lay eyes on Travers—but I can't endure to think of her eating her heart out somewhere, thinking he hates her— Oh, she told me he'd hate her! Larry, can't you choke this Delight person or give her an ounce of arsenic? Because it's Mary Lou whom Travers really loves. And she loves him. This other woman doesn't count," said Jenny magnificently.

"Well, who said she did!" asked Larry.

Lorrimer got him by 'phone.

"I thought you'd be there. Can you come over? he wanted to know. "Jenny, too, if she will —it's rather important."

While Larry was answering, Jenny danced frantically around him, hissing, "Remember you're not supposed to know anything about recent developments;" at which Larry found himself snarking into the 'phone, his face wreathed in false smiles and his voice tinged with jollity as if Lorrimer could see him.

So a little later, they rode over to Westwood and, while Mrs. Lorrimer talked to Jenny in the library and explained to her, very carefully, the whole situation as it now stood, Jenny listening and interpolating the necessary exclamations and murmurs, Larry and Lorrimer went walking together, in the boxwood garden, where Lorrimer told him briefly what happened.

"No need to go into details. You know about everything. In a sense you're responsible," Lorrimer said, trying to smile, "for it was you who gave Mary Lou the advertisement, which I can only designate as 'fatal'—"

"Gosh!" thought Larry, "he's taking it like a soldier—"

"And," Lorrimer went on, it was you who found Delight. She want's to talk with you. I don't know what about. I've asked Mother to tell Jenny the story —you don't want to keep any secrets from your wife, do you?" he asked. "And moreover she'd have to know soon."

Tomorrow — Delight accuses Larry of causing a lot of damage.

FROCKS FROM SUMMER'S GAY ARRAY

Removable Capes a Feature

SKETCHED IN PARIS

The two frocks sketched are shown in Bruyere's Summer collection. At the left is a semi-sports dress in white crepe of loose weave, somewhat resembling shantung. The sleeveless bodice is lolded back on itself at each side of the front and stitched down in single pleats. The sloping yoke at the hips is likewise pleated in folds. The skirt itself is pleated all around. There is a removable cape of orange jersey and a hat of matching orange panama faced with white and trimmed with a band and bow of orange jersey.

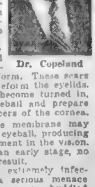

The other sketch shows an afternoon dress of white mousseline dotted in green. The removable cape has revers of green and white plaided taffeta and there is a wide crushed belt of this material. The softly hanging skirt is extremely wide and rippling.

Trachoma Result of Neglect, and Highly Contagious

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.

NEGLECT IN personal hygiene is most undesirable. As a rule, such negligence will cause disease and it always results in some ailment. A disease due to personal carelessness is known as "Trachoma."

This disease is chronic inflammation of the lining membrane of the upper and lower eyelids. It is highly contagious and may be very serious.

When the condition is allowed to remain untreated, scars form. These scars contract and deform the eyelids. The eyelashes become turned in, scratch the eyeball and prepare the way for ulcers of the corneas.

Often a false membrane may form over the eyeball, producing marked impairment in the vision. If treated in an early stage, no complications result.

Trachoma is extremely infectious. It is a serious menace when many persons are huddled together under unsanitary conditions. Lack of fresh air, sunlight, good food and personal cleanliness aid in preparing the way for the spread of the disease.

At one time trachoma was very common in orphan asylums, poor houses and other similar institutions. Due to present knowledge of the need of fresh air, sunlight and other hygienic measures, this disease is now seen only occasionally in North America.

Please, remember that persistent reddening of the eyelids, discharge from the eyes or other discomfort requires medical attention. Do not neglect your eyes. They are very precious and cannot be replaced.

Answers to Health Queries

M. A. A. Q.—What will improve the growth of the eyelashes?

A.—Apply one per cent yellow oxide of mercury ointment to the lashes at night.

Miss D. A. R. Q.—How can hardening of the arteries be diagnosed? The patient is a man of 72, who has attacks resembling acute indigestion—would this be hardening of the arteries? He is active in every way. What would help the pain?

A.—See the doctor for examination. Blood pressure would be a factor under the circumstances. The pain might be due to a number of different conditions. Hardening of the arteries is very apt to be present in a man of this age. His doctor will outline the necessary treatment after he has diagnosed the trouble.

MRS. H. T. Q.—What causes a sort of lameness in my arm and leg at times?

A.—You may be troubled with rheumatism, a constitutional disease characterized by pains in the joints and muscles. Some infection may be responsible and the source of the trouble must be discovered before treatment can be prescribed. For other information send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

Girl's in Love With First Cousin

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of 19 and am in love with my first cousin. It's not right because it is against my religion. Sometimes I say I hate him, but if I don't see him I get worried.

He doesn't say anything if I talk to other boys. He takes many girls out and goes with a fast crowd. He has never asked me out, but he keeps coming to my house. Neither of my parents know about this. Sometimes he acts like a brute. He says he loves me. L. L.

Dear L. L.: Evidently you and your cousin have no intention of marrying; then why make yourselves more unhappy by meeting? Brace up and cut out a situation that makes both of you wretched.

Children of first cousins are apt to be defective, which makes the marriage of such near kin illegal in certain states.

New Style Relieves Jackets

By PARIS BUREAU

PARIS, June 11—Removable capes cannot be detached from the word of smartness this season, and as the season advances we see more and more that the frock with the detachable cape is a winner in the fashion stakes. No doubt there is the tendency to regard the fashion of the dress with matching jacket as just a little overdone, since one sees it everywhere.

And so, as a clever and pleasing alternative, we are turning to the dress with its little removable cape, which may be of matching color or pattern, or else offer a sharp contrast. This type of frock is extremely youthful and youth-tying, which will be sufficient to recommend it to the woman who has declared herself wedded to the frock with its own little jacket.

Sketched for today's page are two little models that feature the cape. At the left is a semi-sports dress in white crepe of loose weave somewhat resembling shantung. The sleeveless bodice is folded back on itself at each side of the front and stitched down in single pleats. The sloping yoke at the hips is likewise pleated in folds. The skirt itself is pleated all around. There is a removable cape of orange jersey is worn with a hat of matching orange panama faced with white and trimmed with a band of orange jersey.

The other sketch shows an afternoon dress of white mousseline, dotted in green. The removable cape has revers of green and white plaided taffeta and there is a wide crushed belt of the same material. The softly hanging, graceful skirt is extremely wide and rippling.

The day before you make the bread, or long enough before using to have it cold, prepare the rind thusly: Cut the peel of 4 ordinary oranges very fine and put on to simmer with enough water to cover. Cook for 10 minutes. Change the water then. The third time add 1 cup of sugar with just a little water and simmer till the peel has a "candied" look.

Rift and mix baking powder, sugar and salt. Cut in butter. Beat together egg and milk and add to dry ingredients. Last of all add orange peel in the batter. Put into greased pan. Let rise for 15 minutes and bake one hour in a moderate oven. This makes a very large loaf, so recipe may be cut in half.—Mrs L. M. Ferzer, 2 School st., Dorchester.

Garden Girl Says

"NEWLY planted shrubs are improved with a light mulch of cut grass or leaves to keep the soil from drying out and prevent weeds. You can leave it on all summer and water and turn it in early next spring, or two or three weeks will do."

Dishes For Cooler Days

By MARTHA LEE

THANKS TO the 57 varieties of New England weather, we may live on salads and crackers and milk for three days and then from out of the East the saving breeze —and presto change for diets.

Today I have a good "main dish" of the rib-sticking variety that I hope you'll try on some of the cooler days. It contains sufficient protein to repair the wear and tear of summer activities on your bodies, and is panned to serve four at an average cost of about a dollar.

Martha Lee

BRAISED VEAL WITH VEGETABLES

Cut two pounds veal leg in chunks and brown in hot fat, then remove. Add 6 pounds little whole white onions to fat and brown, then add 2 cups cooked stringless beans and also brown. Add 2 cups stewed tomatoes, salt and pepper, put meat back on top, cover and simmer until very tender, about 1½ hours.

Freddie (encouraged to being shown off in public): "What was that clever thing I said yesterday, mother?"—WILMA SIMMONS, Island Creek.

Teacher: What is an island?

Sanitary Risk

in carelessly-made substitutes for Kotex

SAFETY should be your first concern in sanitary protection. Health safety. The kind of safety you are certain of in Kotex, the pad that is used in leading hospitals.

But how about those nameless substitutes, of whose makers you know nothing? What assurance have you of their sanitary safety? Who made them? Where? How? Are you sure you'd use them, if you knew their origin?

There's one certain way of avoiding risk. Ask for Kotex. Genuine Kotex. It's immediately clean—made by wonderful, patented machines from start to finish, in surroundings of hospital cleanliness.

Kotex is splendidly comfortable. It may be worn with perfect safety on either side. Soft, filmy layers make adjustment easy. Treated to deodorize. Readily disposable.

EAST HAS LEAD IN ACTIVITY OF INDUSTRY

By FRANK H. MELOON

That the East continues to hold leadership in industrial activity is shown by the figures just made public on electric power production, most closely watched of business indices at this time. Electric power production in the week of June 6 continued to decline, but the percentage of decrease from 1931 was reduced to 2.9. Output on the Atlantic Seaboard ran 4.4 p.c. above that of last year. The territory bounded by Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Milwaukee and St. Louis is requiring substantially less electricity.

Atlantic seaboard gain is not a spotty affair. It has been repeatedly shown during the past few weeks, and offers one of today's brightest spots of encouragement.

Prof. Wm. Lyon Phelps

The principal speaker at the commencement exercises at Babson Institute, June 13, is to be William Lyon Phelps of Yale University. He will speak on "The Courage of Ignorance." He has been a professor of English and Literature at Yale since 1901. His most recent writings are "Happiness," "Adventures and Confessions," "Human Nature and the Gospel," "Essays on American Authors," "As I Like It," and "Some Makers of American Literature."

* * *

Dr. George W. Coleman, president of the institute, will preside. The class of 1931 will be represented on the commencement program by Robert F. Fixel of Chicago, who has been chosen by the institute faculty as one of the outstanding young men of this year's class. Mr. Fixel's subject is "Perspective." Roger W. Babson will present the diplomas.

Webber College, the school of finance for girls founded by Mrs. Roger W. Babson, will hold its commencement exercises jointly with Babson Institute. Mrs. Babson will preside and present diplomas to the graduates.

Woolworth moved ahead today on news that recapitalization of the company's British subsidiary would result in a $78,000,000 net gain in the parent corporation's surplus, equal to $8 a share on the stock. Wall Street is busy discussing just how this will be passed on to the stockholders.

In London books were speedily closed on the Woolworth offering, though it had been expected they might keep open for a day or two. A big public subscription was a surprise to many.

President F. A. Seiberling of the Seiberling Rubber Co. and Goodyear, was quoted as telling the National Association of Purchasing Agents at Toronto that billion dollar rubber industry in United States had not made a single dollar profit in ten years. Low price of crude rubber was one of several causes of lack of profit.

* * *

Mr. Seiberling made his millions in rubber. He is known as "the Little Napoleon of the rubber industry." It is presumed Mr. Seiberling has in mind the entire capital in rubber as some of the big companies have certainly shown gratifying results over the past decade.

Announcement came today that Roger Amory and William Minot have been elected directors of Conveyancers Title Insurance and Mortgage Co. Mr. Amory also becomes vice-president of the company.

Paine, Webber & Co. in their semi-monthly review, just issued, give a comprehensive analysis of the present year 1931 with 1921 in which they point out that patterns of bear markets, despite their likenesses in broad outlines, are dissimilar in details. This fact creates many difficulties in appraising varying features and in determining position of each industry and the units therein.

One great point of difference, they state, between 1921 and 1931 is that in money rates, citing that the present New York Reserve Bank discount rate of 1½ per cent compares with a 6 per cent rate in 1921 and that, while in June, 1921, the range of call money rates was from 5 to 8 per cent, they now average but 1½ per cent. Another point emphasized is that the Dow-Jones average of railroad stocks is now within 5 per cent of the 1921 bottom but the industrial average is just double that year's low.

Bradstreet's Commodity Price Index on June 1, 1921, was $10.62. On the same date this year it was $8.64, which is the lowest level since June, 1914. General level of farm prices is lowest since 1910 with wheat lowest since 1896, and yet farm debts are far greater than at that time.

Ontario & Western Runs Out of Red

Albany, N. Y., June 11—New York, Ontario & Western reports for quarter ended March 31 net of $2423 after charges, against net loss of $238,976 a year before.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Fox Film responded briskly today to the over-night report of the election of a powerful and influential board of directors composed of leading bankers and industrialists in New York, Boston and other financial centers.

The dividend "news" was good, the stock having been put on a $2.50 annual basis, with the prospect held out of the return to a $4 basis by the end of the year.

Amusement Stocks Show Improvement

Fox Film today soon showed a gain of 3 points and a 7-point recovery from the low of last week. Loew's, Paramount and other theatrical stocks rose a point or less, and further improvement was recorded in amusement bonds.

New York Central Has Further Rise

New York Central carried its new recovery today up about 2 points on further response to the retaining of the 8 per cent dividend by the directors. New Haven, Southern Pacific and other leading rails sold higher.

"Traders' Market" Seen in Wall Street

It was a "traders' market" today, with alternating backward and forward swings of the favorites through a narrow price range and in gradually diminishing volume.

Southern Ry. Off on Dividend News

Southern Railway today quickly fell off three points on announcement by the directors that upon payment of the August dividend no more dividends would be paid this year. Heretofore the road has paid at the rate of $8 per share annually.

National Biscuit's Earnings Estimates

Interests usually well informed on the affairs of National Biscuit state that there has been a reduction in sales of some of the company's products in recent months, and while costs have been lowered, there is a tendency to revise downward previous estimates of the earnings for the current year. It is now believed that results will not equal the $3.41 a share reported for 1930, although the reduction will not be substantial.

American Can Action Studied

The manner in which American Can has been supported on selling the past few weeks has been the subject of considerable comment around the Street. Only a short time ago the stock was selling at the same price as Steel common, but the latter is now materially under Can. One reason that traders who bought American Can sold Steel common as a hedge against it.

Can is one of the issues which made its low of the bear market thus far within 60 days after the initial break in October, 1929, when the stock sold down to 86. It has not been as low at any time since then.

'L' ISSUES ARE AT NEW HIGHS IN BOSTON

Boston Elevated issues led Boston Stock prices to higher levels in today's dealings on the Exchange. The first and second preferred shares were at new highs in gains of around a point while the common and preferred showed fractional gains.

Edison and New River preferred each showed advances of a point. United Shoe was 1⅛ higher. Fractional gains were shown for American Telephone, Gillette, New England Telephone and Stone & Webster.

The reduction of the Warren Brothers dividend caused a slight reaction in that issue. Sullivan Machine dropped 2 points to a new low, while Kreuger & Toll lowered around a point to a new 1931 low. Losses of a point or more were recorded for Atchison and Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway preferred.

Statement issued after the Warren Brothers Co. dividend meeting follows:

"Although current business, notably in the domestic field, continues to come to hand in most satisfactory volume, it was decided to reduce the quarterly dividend on the common stock, payable July 1 to stockholders of record June 22, from 75 to 50 cents a share. This action was taken in the interest of conservatism and mindful of the desirability under present conditions of maintaining strong cash reserves."

Warren Brothers directors declared the usual quarterly preferred dividends of 25 cents a share on first preferred, 29 1-6 cents a share on second preferred and 75 cents a share on convertible preferred, all payable July 1 to stock of record June 22.

WOOLWORTH'S SALES ARE INCREASED

Simultaneous with announcement of benefits from recapitalization of the British affiliate, it was disclosed that sales of F. W. Woolworth Co. the first week of June increased $391,979 or 7.77 per cent over a year before.

While sales have been increasing since the first of April, the favorable comparison of the first week in June with 1930 contrasts with a decrease of $2,297,635 or 2.1 per cent the first five months.

Improvement is being reported from all sections. Gains along Atlantic seaboard are especially noteworthy, while the West is steadily forging ahead. After a period of unsettled business, the southwestern division is again coming along nicely, as also the important sections centering around the industrial areas of Chicago, Cleveland and Detroit.

The sharp increase so far this month is in line with expectations of the management, Pres. Parson having recently said indications are that June will make up practically all the loss incurred the previous five months. He said the May decrease of more than half the decrease for five months, was due to one less business day than in 1930 and the fact that the Memorial Day occurred Saturday.

"This," he said, "caused a loss in Saturday's sales from a year ago of $1,446,125."

RAILS HIGHER AT CLOSE OF QUIET DAY

New York, June 11—Rails pulled the stock market in Wall Street out of a late decline today.

Prices see-sawed through the quiet session, but a slow sag in the last hour was arrested when a buying movement began in the carrier issues. Sales were under 2,000,000 shares.

INDUSTRIALS RECOVER

Interest in the rails quickened coincident with the meeting of Southern, Eastern and Western executives for a general discussion of freight rates.

Wall Street believed it was probable the President would agree on a petition to be presented to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Leading industrials recovered virtually all of their moderate declines, closing with small net changes, but mostly lower. The rails were up 1 to 6. A few utilities were fairly strong.

Atchison advanced 6 and Union Pacific 5. Delaware & Hudson, Baltimore & Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York Central and Rock Island rallied 2 to 4, and Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific and Illinois Central 2 or more.

Nickel Plate was soft, losing 13.

TELEPHONE IS HIGHER

U. S. Steel, American Can, General Electric and Radio showed minor fractional recessions. Westinghouse was down 1½. American Telephone rose a point and Electric Power & Light 2.

Fox Film provided a high light at the opening, rising 3 points on the strength of the board reorganization and the optimistic statement of the company's position, which included the expression of a hope that the former dividend rate could be restored in the third quarter.

In addition to the reduction by Southern Railway, directors of the Chicago, Indianapolis & Louisville omitted payments on the common and preferred issues, a substantial majority of which is owned by Southern Railway and Louisville & Nashville.

Real Silk Hosiery passed the preferred payment and withdrew the previously declared stock dividends on the common.

Woolworth extended its recent gains on the news that recapitalization of the English subsidiary was adding $78,000,000 to the parent company's surplus, bringing that item to more than $150,000,000. The addition is equal to $8 a share on the stock and Wall Street is wondering whether and to what extent this will be passed along.

Today's meeting of the railroad executives was followed with interest and there was a belief that definite agreement on the size of the freight increase to be requested might be reached. Decision in favor of a 15 per cent rise has seemed likely, since this could boost gross revenues about 10 per cent.

Reports that copper had been sold at 8 cents were discredited in some quarters and the day's transactions were at 8¼ cents. Copper to lower to 7 cents a pound was one Wall St. forecast today.

Call money firmed in the outside market where funds at 1 per cent again dried up and all offerings were at the stock exchange renewal rate, 1½ per cent.

General Motors Is Owned by 285,655

Total number of General Motors common and preferred stockholders for the second quarter of 1931 was 285,655, compared with 286,378 for the first quarter of 1931 and with 243,428 for the second quarter of 1930.

There were 268,400 holders of common stock and the balance of 17,255 represents holders of preferred stock. These figures compare with 268,907 common stockholders and 17,471 preferred for the first quarter of 1931.

Closing on Curb Market Is Mixed

New York, June 11—Curb stocks closed today's listless session in more or less of a deadlock, with strength in a handful of pool sponsored favorites offset by sluggishness in other sections of the market. Utilities were irregularly lower with better than average progress recorded by Associated Gas & Electric 5 per cent preferred which jumped 14 points.

Hudson and Essex Sales Increased

Detroit, June 11—Hundson and Essex sales in week ended June 7 increased 30 cars over like week of 1930, the increase being attributed to wider distribution of cars equipped with selective free wheeling, said Pres. McAneeny. This is the first time this year Hudson and Essex reported an increase over a year ago.

Cotton Higher in New York Market

New York, June 11—Cotton futures today closed 20 to 27 points higher. July 8.58; Oct. 8.95-96; Dec. 9.19-20; Jan. 9.30; March 9.47-50; May 9.67-69. Spot steady; middling 8.65.

Grains Are Lower in Chicago Market

Chicago, June 11—Grains were generally off at the close today. Closing prices for wheat were ¼ to ⅜c lower, corn unchanged to ⅜c down, and oats ¼ to ⅜c off. Rye was steady at ⅛c higher.

Seat on Exchange Sells for $212,000

New York, June 11—Arrangements have been made for sale of a New York Stock Exchange seat at $212,000, up $2000 over the previous sale.

GOLD DUST

O. S. D., Worcester—I hold some Gold Dust. I enclose a list of my investments. Should the list be changed? Please tell me something about Gold Dust up to date.

Ans.—No change in your list is needed. At the past week's low price, Gold Dust sold at half its peak price of the year, and its yield exceeded 11 per cent. The weakness, while in part reflecting general market unsettlement, was specifically occasioned by heavy selling which developed from sources close to the company. This selling was instigated by a special condition incidental to the company's participation on the support side of its own stock. More frequently, there had been some liquidation by reason of an unfavorable turn to the company's earnings trend.

Selling from both these sources, however, is understood to have dried up, and there has been a revival of buying for company account, especially during the extreme weakness in the stock over the last week or so.

Gold Dust attracted considerable friendly attention from supposedly well-informed interests when it was selling considerably higher in price. It was recognized that this company could hardly be expected to avoid completely the general depression, but it was expected to fare better than the average enterprise.

Earnings in 1930 confirmed this opinion, equalling $3.51 a share, off only 55 cents from 1929 net. This year income is running probably 25 per cent or more under 1930 returns, yet even this decline would not bring earnings below the $2.50 dividend requirement. The stock at current levels is discounting a possible lowering of the dividend.

The most potent factor in the stock's ability to win worthwhile friends is the impressive record of the management. This is especially true of its constant reduction in obligations prior to the common stock. Thus, during 1930 the entire funded debt was eliminated requiring payment of $14,907,000.

Despite these heavy retirements, the company closed the year with a working capital of $14,883,000, total current assets of $22,512,000 including $5,423,000 cash and $2,400,000 call loans, the latter two items alone exceeding current liabilities of $7,629,000.

NO DIVIDENDS

E. G., Dunstable—I shall appreciate some information on Aluminum Company of America. How much does it pay in dividends?

Ans.—No cash dividends have been distributed on Aluminum Company of America common stock since 1925. Payments at various rates had been maintained previously from 1906. In June, 1928, stock of all subsidiaries operating outside the United States was transferred to a new company, known as Aluminum, Ltd. This stock was then given to common stockholders of Aluminum Company of Amercia on the basis of one share for each three shares held. In 1930 net income was $11,672,726, or $1.93 a share, contrasted with net of $25,318,050, or $11.18 a share in 1929.

NO FORECAST

E. S., Waltham—What do you think of the outlook for Canadian Pacific bought at 27?

Ans.—We must sidestep any comment on the market position of Canadian Pacific. The past record of earnings and dividends is fine. In place of two previous quarterly payments of 62½ cents each on the present stock, an interim dividend of 31¼ cents will be distributed July 1. The amount of future payments will be governed solely by earnings. Net for 1930 was $2.49 a share, against $2.79 in 1929. Net income, after taxes, for four months ended April 30, 1931, was $4,505,750, contrasted with $5,572,983 in similar period of last year.

DECLINE IN NET

G. K., Belmont—Twenty shares Southern Pacific were bought for income. Why has the stock declined? Is the dividend in danger?

Ans.—Southern Pacific's $6 dividend, paid from 1909, was earned by a fair margin in 1930. Net income amounted to $8.01 a share, against $12.99 in 1929. Net operating income for four months ended April 30 was $2,992,165. This contrasted with $9,585,899 for similar period in 1929. The dividend situation has been questioned since the stock has declined to a level where the yield is around 9 per cent.

$11,000 TO INVEST

D. D., Newton—Please suggest good securities for the investment of $11,000 now in savings banks at 4 per cent. I am middle-aged, employed on part time, and have one dependent.

Ans.—Here is a plan that will leave an ample reserve for the savings bank: $2000 each Lawyers' Title & Guaranty 5½s, Title Guarantee & Trust 5s and Prudence Company 5½s; ten shares each American Sugar Refining preferred, North American Edison preferred, and 30 Southern California Edison preferred A. The total expenditure is less than $9000, and you will get a combined income of $502.

HAS A LOSS

C. V., Arlington—What shall I do with 50 shares Radio-Keith-Orpheum "A" bought at 22?

Ans.—You must rely on your own judgment. Radio-Keith-Orpheum A, now about ten points under the price you paid, is a speculation. It pays no dividend. Net income in 1930 was equivalent to $1.45 a share, contrasted with 92 cents in 1929. In the March quarter earnings were 44 cents a share. Unofficial estimate for first half of the year is around 65 cents a share.

ANOTHER CITY

M. W., Brookline—Is there any hope for Kennecott Copper? I am holding 50 shares at a big loss.

Ans.—An attempt to guess future prices for Kennecott Copper would not be worth while. June 1 directors announced that the stock would be on a $1 annual basis commencing July 1. This is the third reduction in eleven months. Current low metal prices do no produce profits. Earnings in 1930 dropped to $1.66 a share, against $5.64 in 1929.

TELEVISION LOOMING

Aylesworth, Edison and Brisbane Address Convention

Aside from broadcasting speeches and melody by the Vincent Lopez Orchestra, far greater significance marks the Atlantic City convention of the National Electric Light Association. Light in itself will constitute an important phase of that much-discussed television, which radio men keep telling us is just around the corner. Powerful lighting equipment never before heard of is destined to be introduced shortly as a means of bringing about practical television transmission.

It naturally follows that leading executives of radio and illuminating interests are found in attendance and conference this week at New Jersey's famous coast resort. M. H. Aylesworth of NBC is there, listed as a principal speaker, while Thomas A. Edison, wizard of light, talks from Florida. Arthur Brisbane, famed journalist, also addresses the group. Thus we find three great captains of American industry speaking of and for electrical progress.

Listeners tonight (WEEI at 9) will hear the voices of these men. The entire world values their knowledge, as it is devoted to perfecting radio and the development of television.

Storm Damages Squantum . . . . .

At nine minutes after 10 last night, WAAB and WNAC transmitters ceased to function at Squantum. So punctual are these stations that it didn't take listeners more than a minute to realize something was wrong. How the telephone did ring at the Boston studios. Storm conditions caused power to go dead throughout Squantum, which finished the day's operations on both stations.

Donald Hughes, juvenile star of the Daddy and Rollo skits (WNAC), went to an art exhibit with his father and a critic. In discussing a particular masterpiece, the critic spoke of the artist thusly: "That man, with one stroke of a brush, could change a happy, smiling face into a countenance of pain." Right then Rollo (Donald, rather) piped up with "So can My Mother."

Don't forget to hear Mayor Curley tonight at 10:45 (WNAC). Back home from his trip abroad, "Our Jim" will no doubt tell Boston listeners he is as glad to be back as the Hub is to have him once more, safe and sound.

Fan Fare, Overheard Underground . . . .

En route to his humble abode, your not always humble servant tuned in on two comedians lawst evening and they should have been on the networks. There was no microphone to be had, so the incident is reported herewith and below:

SCENE—Park Street Station.
TIME—Last Night about Seven.
CHARACTERS—Two male radio fans.
(curtain rises)

FIRST FAN—"How do you like Morton Downey's quarter hour?"
SECOND FAN—"Oh, I dunno, I don't think it's so good——"
FIRST FAN—"Do you hear it much?"
SECOND FAN—"You said it! Every night. How about you?"
FIRST FAN—"I hear it every night, too."
SECOND FAN—"What's your slant on it?"
FIRST FAN—"I think it's kinda tough myself, sorta mushy."
SECOND FAN—"Right! But what's the idea of listenin' then?"
FIRST FAN—"My wife and daughter go daffy over it, that's why."
SECOND FAN—"Same here. Funny, ain't it?"
FIRST FAN—"You said it! Women are funny anyways."
SECOND FAN—"Funny is right! You said it."
SECOND FAN—"You said it! Hey, look, my car. I gotta go."
FIRST FAN—"Okay, s'long, I'll be seein' ya."
SECOND FAN—"Right! Keep listenin' . . ."
FIRST FAN—"You said it! I have to."

P. S.—There was more, too. The whole conversation would have made a broadcast good enough to worry Amos and Andy ine, honest. N. F. T.

CAPONE INVITED HERE TO GUIDE RUM RACKET

her rackets, and it is rumored that the underworld king traffics in drugs.

There he keeps in touch with the situation in each community.

A short time ago a Boston lawyer made an important contact with Capone. This attorney was also dissatisfied with conditions here, but principally as they concerned the legal profession. He figured there was not enough money. So he began making visits to Chicago, the Capone stronghold. Soon he established a contact with the Capone organization and business began to come his way. Now he spends more and more time in Chicago and is looked on as Capone's legal representative in Boston.

Whether or not the invitation to Capone to come to Boston to organize the liquor racket, was extended through this lawyer, I do not know. I am informed, however, that it was made, and as a result representatives of Al's have been here looking over the situation. They came here, not as "guns" according to my information, but rather as well-dressed and suave business men. That is what they are, as a matter of fact. Keen, well-informed business men authoritating on the liquor business.

NOT ENTHUSIASTIC

They studied the situation from every angle, demanding accurate information, together with statistics. In conferences with Boston's overlords they went over the local racket minutely, and did not display any great amount of enthusiasm. They were not here for that purpose, anyway. Their duty was to obtain absolutely accurate information of the local liquor racket and report back to Capone and his aides.

Capone's aides, I am told, play a big part in the handling of his projects. Al's forte is his ability as an organizer and strategist. The late William Howard Taft once said that true executive ability consisted in the faculty of being able to obtain men to do your work for you. Capone has this faculty. He has retained the services of numerous extremely able citizens, who attend to all the details of his far-flung organization, leaving him free to plan strategy.

The fate of the Boston liquor racket now rests in the hands of these aides and their chief. The final decision, of course, will be made by Capone.

DECISION AWAITED

In the meantime the local Big Shots are anxiously waiting for Capone's decision. By bringing him in here they feel they will have put across a big stroke. Capone and his organization can be relied on to get every dime possible out of any racket. Naturally they will take a cut, and a good one, but even so it is figured the profits of those associated with them locally will be worth while. Particularly as it is figured that all the little fellows now cluttering up the racket will be driven off by the Capone organization, and hijacking will be reduced to a minimum.

According to present plans only a select few of the local men will be allowed to cut in on the racket after Capone takes hold.

Capone is the only man who can freeze the little fellow according to my informant, and therefore the proposition has been put up to him. If it goes through it will probably mean that only good liquor will be sold, as Capone has the reputation of handling nothing else. Probably prices will be raised to some extent, but it is believed the sustained good quality of the liquor will offset any dissatisfaction this may cause.

Further revelations will be made tomorrow by the Masked Reporter.

Body Seen Floating in Merrimac River

Newburyport, June 11—Coast Guardemen, bridge tenders and police maintained a watch today in the Merrimac river, hoping to find a body which the West Newbury police said was floating downstream. The body was seen off River st., West Newbury, and the authorities were asked to watch for it on the outgoing tide.

On the Air

TELEVISION activities are bustling, these days. W1XAV hopes to broadcast a Fenway Park ball game within the next month; CBS is establishing "looking-in" points around N. Y., so that technicians can view the network's progress along those lines; both the CBS and NBC are signing up beauties in anticipation of television broadcasting . . . In line with this last, William S. Paley, CBS president, states that he expects by 1932 television will operate on a commercial basis. And today M. H. Aylesworth, NBC president, will discuss possibilities of "visible radio" before delegates to the N. E. L. A. convention in Atlantic City.

COMING OUT OF THE ETHER tonight: Rosamund Johnson's colored male quartet will harmonize their way through the R. Vallee hour, WEEI at 8, and among other offerings they will be heard in an arrangement of "The Peanut Vendor," with the voices imitating the playing of a rumba orch. . . . Luella Melius, soprano, brightens up the Melodies feature, WBZ at 8:30 . . . Georgie Price, vaudevillian, and Grace Hayes, bought up from NBC for the summer, feature the first of a series of Shore Gardens b'dcasts o'er WNAC at 11:30 . . . Jack Pepper and his ukulele lend spice to the Radio Roundup, WAAB at 11:30 . . . Joe Malcewicz and Howard Cantonwine will lock themselves in wrestling embraces, and Gerry Harrison will describe the match on WAAB at 10 . . . Henry Burbig, dialect comedian, is interviewed on the Meet the Artist p'gram, WAAB at 5:45.

The Crime Club will substitute two half-hour programs each week in place of the nightly series, starting July 6. A larger network will hear the broadcasts, which will offer a complete mystery drama on each p'gram . . . The day after the Crime Club cease their nightly b'dcasting, Sisters of the Skillet, "female" purveyors of domestic wisdom, will start a four times a week series on the NBC . . . Breen and De Rose, celebrate their eighth radio birthday tonight at 11:30 on a NBC-WJZ network. Rudy Vallee and Paul Whiteman will supply their orchestras for the b'dcast, which will be a gala affair, and leading NBC talent will participate. Not heard locally . . . When his contract with Roxy expires June 15, Erno Rapee will take over the duties of NBC general musical director, responsible for the quality of all musical broadcasts.—M. G. M.

SEASHORE AND COUNTRY RESORTS

BETTER BORDER ROADS URGED

Poland Spring, Me., June 11—Arrangements have been completed for the Maine-Canada highway conference to be held at the Poland Spring House on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, as a result of a movement originated by the late Hiram Ricker of Poland Spring, and former president of the State of Maine publicity bureau.

The Canadian delegation will be given a special demonstration in the use of tarvia on highways through special arrangement made by the Maine Highway Commission.

FOR BETTER CO-OPERATION

It is hoped through the present conference to bring about a closer understanding and co-operation between Maine and Canadian officials to improve the connecting roads which would ultimately bring into Maine and from Maine into Canada motor tourists who are now diverted into Vermont, New Hampshire and New York.

The Canadian group will arrive at the Maine border at Jackman on Friday afternoon, June 12. They will be met by Maine officials and escorted to Lakewood as dinner and overnight guests of Herbert Swett, president of the State of Maine Publicity Bureau.

The Canadians making up the party will be headed by J. E. Perrault and wife, Minister of Highways and Mines of the Province of Quebec; J. L. Boulanger and wife, Deputy Commissioner and Alex Fraser and wife, chief engineer. Joining with them will be Mr. and Mrs. Pion, president, and J. E. Renaud and wife, secretary and treasurer of the Quebec Automobile Club.

TROUT LUNCHEON

On Saturday the party will be the guests of Walter Wyman, at Bingham dam where a trout luncheon will be served. Following the tarvia demonstration the party will proceed to Poland Spring where they will be the guests of the Poland Spring management during their stay in Maine.

A dinner will be given Saturday evening with Arthur Staples, editor of the Lewiston Journal, as master of ceremonies.

Mass will be held Sunday morning in the Poland Spring Chapel. An auto ride to Portland will follow. The party will be luncheon guests of Henry P. Rines at the Danish Village, returning to Poland Spring via Old Orchard.

On Monday the party will be escorted to the border, stopping at Augusta as luncheon guests of Governor Gardiner.

BUYS MAINE HOTEL

Passaconaway Hotel at York Cliffs, Me., acquired and now being operated by Frank W. Dailey, Boston broker and owner of Dreamwold Hall Inn, Egypt.

SEA-BUS TRIPS TO BANGOR

Combination sea and bus trips between Bangor and Boston have been arranged by the Eastern Steamship Lines and began on June 1. Under the new plan, passengers will have the option of leaving Bangor for Boston on the steamer at 2 p. m., daylight saving time, or they may remain in Bangor until 5:15, daylight saving time, and then be conveyed, without extra charge, by motor bus leaving from Eastern Steamship Lines Bangor pier to Rockland, leaving for Boston at 8 p. m.

Passengers who sail from Boston also have the privilege of continuing by steamer up the river to Bangor, or may transfer to a bus upon arrival of the ship at Belfast the following morning, at 7 o'clock, and be in Bangor at 8:30 a. m. in time for the opening of business.

Through this arrangement the traveling time between Boston and Bangor, in both directions, can be cut down by several hours, and one of the most delightful motor car rides in Maine, along the Penobscot, is furnished Eastern Steamship Lines' passengers without extra charge.

NEW BEDFORD SERVICE SOON

On June 18 the Colonial Steamship Lines will start their early schedule of sailings direct to New Bedford.

The ships Concord and Lexington will leave on alternate days from Pier 11, North river, at the foot of Liberty st., at 6 p. m. (D. S. T.), arriving in New Bedford the next morning at 6 o'clock.

DAILEY TAKES OVER HOTEL

Frank W. Dailey, proprietor of Dreamwold Hall Inn, at Egypt, has taken over the management of the Passaconaway Hotel at York Cliffs, Me. This is a step in the proposed development by the Dailey organization of a chain of hotels.

Mr. Dailey, who is a Milk st. broker, announced many additional features for his new hotel, including yachting, boating, saddle horses and the like.

The Dailey management expects to take over a Boston hotel in the near future.

FIVE AND TEN

must have been groping, between dances, for air to clear his fuddled brain—had ridden it into the ballroom about three o'clock in the morning, plunging into a great crystal and lapis lazuli candelabrum of 50 bulbs, toppling it over, blowing the fuse, and crashing the evening into darkness, as he landed in a ringing mess that stirred the household and reached Rarick as he lay abed, sleepless.

"I dislike to have to mention it to you, Jennifer; you are no longer a child, but either you pick your friends with more discrimination or don't have them here."

That was the evening, seated over coffee in the library, her eyes level and burning under her straight bang, that Jennifer burst forth:

Sell the House

"Let's chuck it, father. Sell the house!"

Sell the house! He could have told her, almost as far back as her mission to him in behalf of Cataract Lodge, that he had already sold it.

"That is," she added, grinding out her cigarette with a sort of fierce enjoyment at the timeliness of her thrust, "unless you have already."

He had.

"It's a morgue. It's a tomb. It's a mausoleum. I hate it."

"Then what?" he said, with his chin touching his shirt-front and his eyes up at her.

"Then what? Anything. Take me to—to Korea—Abyssinia—at least they are destinations."

He regarded her slowly, as if he could not have done marveling that she had no wisdom. She had been away twice that winter. First to Paris, scuttling home after a month, full of what she called the French heebie-jeebies.

Later on, there was a yachting cruise out of Florida waters, for which she must have stood sponsor for all expense. Rarick's impulse, when Hellman presented him with the bills amounting to twenty-one thousand dollars for this week's divertissment, had been to discipline her by radical way of refusal, under threat of public declaration, to meet any such future expenditures!

Wanton Waste

But when the time came for him to take up with her the matter of what he regarded as wanton and cruel waste, she took her place across the tabledesk from him with a childlike obedience that made her suddenly seem very small to him and tortured, and something failed him.

There was a wild kind of distress about Jennifer these days.

She had the look of a person who wants to rip open his collar for more air. She had the rolling look to her eyes of someone frightened. The disagreeable thought smote Rarick that almost anything might happen to a girl that taut. What hurts you, Jennifer? he wanted to say to her. Tell me where the trouble lies?

She could not have told. He realized that. It is possible that he himself could have analyzed it before Jennifer.

"Jenny Rarick has left me in a hell-hole," she once told Gratton, whom she was seeing on fitful occasions. "I can't seem to get out of it, chiefly because I can't seem to want to get out. Isn't it strange, Gratt? I know I'm in hell, but I can't want sufficiently to climb out.. How do you make that out?"

"Stop trying to make yourself out, Jennifer," he had replied. "That's your trouble, perhaps."

"I hate you," she had replied to that, and walked out of his room. He did not folow. Waiting on the threshold outside his door for a moment, it had seemed to her that nothing ever in the world could matter so much as his following her, to unlock her clenched hand and tuck his into it.

At the Door

He, too, stood waiting on the room side of that door, waiting to do just that, his body rigid, though, against the move.

Rarick, trying as he had done all of her life, to clamber on to some basis of intimacy with this girl who was so shy of him, and again watching there months of her misbehavior, began, a little grimly, to understand.

The futility of waiting further was borne in upon him. If the death of Jenny, leaving them stranded in this wilderness of Gothic aisles, had not hurled them into quick and sympathetic understanding, then it was not to happen the way it did in the benign world of people in books.

What he said to her this night, over coffee, could not have come off this way a twelve, or even a six-month before, when a high-handed and evasive scene would have been precipitated.

"Are you in love with young Gratton?"

"Damn it, yes!"

There was no surprise in her voice, possibly because her mind was flooded with nothing else but the hypothetical reply to such a hypothetical question.

(To Be Continued Tomorrow).

Gas War Cuts Down California Income

Los Angeles, June 11 (US)—Petroleum economists estimated today that flow of money in California from outside sources has declined $200,000 a day because of the so-called gasoline war. Instead of previous $350,000 to $370,000 daily income for sale of gasoline to customers outside the state, California is now receiving between $150,000 and $170,000.

French Line Asks Aid of Government

Paris, June 10—Faced with a deficit of nearly $9,000,000 in operating expenses, the French Line, passenger line operators, has applied to the French government for a $6,000,000 subsidy.

A request was made also for a moratorium on the major part of a 300,000,000 franc debt to the government. A new ship building program makes such a moratorium necessary, it was stated.

STOMACH TROUBLE

Mrs. Mary Reardon, 650 E. 6th St., So. Boston, says: "I am 72 years old. For the past three years I suffered very much from stomach trouble. I was compelled to spend a great part of my time in bed, with pains around my heart and shoulder blades. A local doctor failed to relieve me. A neighbor Wm. Walsh, told me how Dr. Walsh had helped him when he suffered much as I did. I had Dr. Walsh treat me and soon was a great booster for Dr. Walsh. I told all my friends how much Dr. Walsh had helped me. I took my daughter to Dr. Walsh, and she, too, sings Dr. Walsh's praises. I permit the publication of this testimonial gladly, in the hope of helping others who suffer as I did."

(Signed) Mrs. Mary Reardon.

REPEAT ORDERS
"Good will is the disposition of a customer to return to the place of business where he has been well served," says a decision of the United States Supreme Court.
The thousands of new and used motor cars purchased from this store and affiliated companies during the past twelve months—the majority repeat orders—are an excellent barometer of our owners' good will.
This week we offer fine-looking—comfortable automobiles — with used mileage replaced—for less money than they cost to build. The stock includes 53 Buicks, 3 Packards, 6 Nashs, 7 Chryslers, 5 Studebakers, 6 Dodges—and an unusually good selection of other makes.

Revise Bonehead Tariff!

Time for Congress to Act

The time has come for the American Congress to formulate a prosperity-building, instead of a prosperity-destroying tariff law.

The Hawley-Smoot Tariff act of 1930, which is coming to be known as the bonehead tariff, antagonized foreign customers throughout the world.

Of the adverse foreign reactions, Canada's upward revision of its schedule on 200 commodities, aimed chiefly at the United States, is the latest and most important.

The Canadian adjustment, which will tend further to clog up the channels of foreign trade, emphasizes the one-sidedness of our tariff policy.

Apparently, the present tariff law is based on the naive and puerile assumption that American foreign trade can be a one-way trade, consisting solely of exports.

On the contrary, every adult economist recognizes that in the last analysis the goods which we export are paid for with merchandise and commodities which we import.

The lack of economic equilibrium throughout the world is in no small measure intensified by tariff barriers, which have been set up to interfere with the free and natural flow of merchandise.

Perhaps of late the United States has set a bad tariff example to the world which has carried the protective principle to riotous excesses.

The Hearst newspapers strongly urge Congress to face economic realities, and to set a new world fashion in sensible tariff principles.

For decades, these newspapers have advocated a reasonable tariff for protection of home industries, and at the same time sensible reciprocity for the development of exports.

The reciprocity phase has been forgotten in recent American tariff bills.

The logical place to start a reciprocity arrangement is with Canada, our neighbor and our best customer.

As matters now stand, the United States is on the least preferred list in respect to Canadian tariffs.

The new Dominion schedules give special preference to the British Empire, intermediate rates to nations with which the country has special trade agreements, and general rates, carrying the highest imposts, to other countries.

The new Canadian schedules, aimed chiefly against the United States, constitute the Dominion's answer to the Hawley-Smoot tariff, which, by the way, has not even benefited the special interests which sponsored it.

The time has come for a modification of trade-restricting tariff policies.

The United States should take the initiative and reopen reciprocity negotiations, which were dropped in 1911 as a result of a turndown by the Canadian electorate.

Perhaps the quickest and most flexible arrangement would be the authorization by Congress of remission by the executive of duties of specified raw materials or merchandise from foreign countries which make reciprocal concessions to the United States.

Reciprocity as a supplement to the national tariff policy is the common sense formula for ending destructive economic warfare, which is proving harmful to business men and workers everywhere.

Reciprocity, as F. W. Taussig, eminent Harvard economist, once remarked, consists of the frank admission that foreign trade is not always a game in which each country should try to get the better of the other, but is, sometimes at least, an exchange from which both may profit.

Representatives and Senators have a great opportunity at the next meeting of Congress so to revise the tariff as to appease, rather than to antagonize, our foreign customers.

Reciprocity would inject the essential element of good will into our international trade relations, and would keep the American flag flying high in world markets.

Happy Marriages

There is good sense in the statement of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church that one reason there is so much trouble about marriage is because:

"We are educated to demand our rights regardless of our responsibilities."

If industrial civilization is to advance, there must be much freedom, much emphasis upon rights. But if human happiness is to be served by industrial civilization, there must be much obedience, much emphasis upon responsibility.

Married folk should demand of themselves the RIGHT to be patient, to carry responsibility, to refrain from flying off into tangents of rage every time the centrifugal forces of the wheel of modern life speed up.

Paul Valery, French poet, once said that poetry does not come from freedom, but from servitude. The freedom to enter the soul-building servitude to ideals of permanence and civilization creates that poetry which is marital happiness. There is still truth in Robert Burns' lines:

"To make a happy fireside clime,
To weans and wife—
That's the true pathos, and sublime
Of human life."

Deaf Drivers

Dr. Roy H. Kirkpatrick, of Boston, told the American Federation of the Hard-of-Hearing:

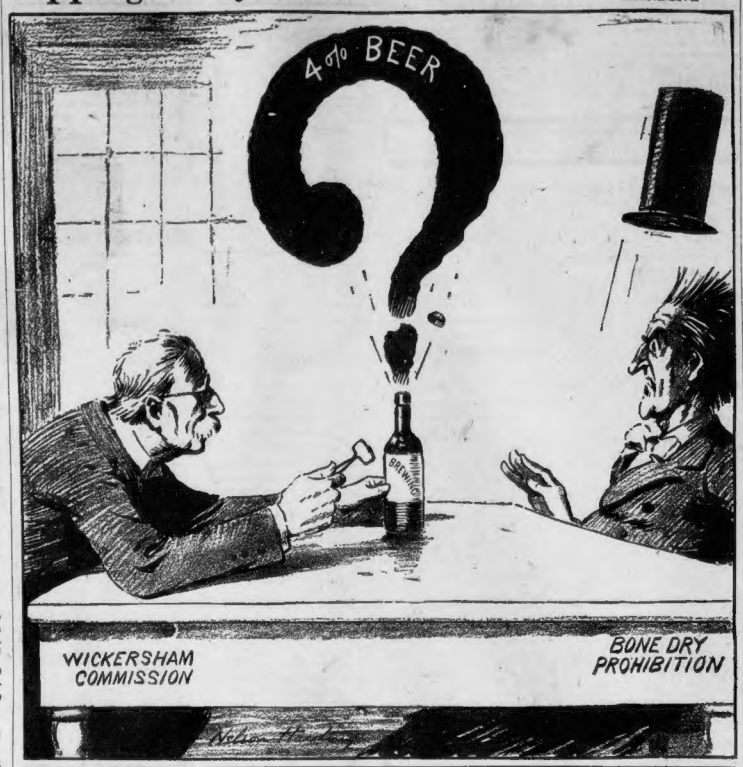

"The deaf or hard-of-hearing driver is a careful driver, mindful of his defect and making his eyes do the work of his ears."

Then, too, the deaf driver is spared that insulting racket made by the horn of some other driver whose manners would be acceptable in bedlam.

Deaf drivers do not hear this iron voice of folly braying in the land. Even the blind may console themselves with the thought that they do not have to behold such smiles as those which crease the face of some young man armed with a steering wheel and pride of purse.

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Why Do You Have Moods?

MOODS . . . queer things, aren't they?

You'll be feeling fine. Then, suddenly, for no good reason, everything will go blah. You feel dead inside—as though all sensation had stopped forever. Or blue—choked with some mysterious sorrow which you can't define. Or vaguely irritated—at odds with everyone. You hate life. You wish you could crawl off into a corner. I never have to do another thing . . . never have to speak to another person.

Elsie Robinson

You tell yourself it's absurd to feel like this. You say you ought to be ashamed . . . things might be a thousand times worse . . . look at the troubles some people have. You count your blessings. But it doesn't do any good. You're still wretched. Why? You don't know why. That's the worst of it. If only you could know why such moods happen, you might protect yourself against them or endure them better.

You can know why they happen. They happen because you are a Human Being and not a Cow or a Catfish.

You have a thinking brain . . . a feeling, emotional system. But you have these things AT A PRICE. If you are intelligent enough to think, you are bound to think of irritating as well as inspiring things. If you are sensitive enough to feel, you are bound to feel distressing as well as delightful. And you are also bound to have stagnant moments when your weary receiving apparatus will seem to have gone "dead." That is the penalty of having a receiving apparatus.

Moods are the price you pay for having a human brain and heart.

It's a great gift to have Human Life . . . but it's also a great challenge. Billions of lives came and went before one form of life arrived which was fit to house the brain and heart of Man . . . which was fit to stand the strain of Thought and Feeling. And many who now wear human form are not standing that strain. They may speak human language, use human gestures, but when it comes to thinking and feeling they have little on any cow.

Human Life is the greatest gift on earth, but it is also the greatest challenge. Can you accept that challenge? Have you gumption enough to stand the strain of "moods"?

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

A Touch of Piccadilly

NEW YORK, June 11—A touch of Piccadilly has come to upper Madison ave. Doubtless most visitors to London have lingered haltingly at the appetizing windows at Fortnum and Mason at Piccadilly and Duke st. Their quaint advertisements dating back from 1710 are eagerly sought by collectors.

The Madison ave. branch shop, not as rich and varied as the original, is, however, suffocatingly British. And so as in London it whets the palates of gourmets. Pepys, Pitt, Thackeray, Thomas Burke and Carlyle penned pithy panegyrics to Fortnum and Mason.

Gladstone and Disraeli shopped there and the present royal family are occasional patrons. From the establishment Queen Victoria ordered 250 pounds of beef tea sent to Florence Nightingale on the Crimean front. Far back in the mildewed years Mason was a kitchen maid and Fortnum a Queen Anne servant.

In the London shop one finds such British edibles as marmalades, chutney, puddings, grouse, kippers and smoked salmon. Along with such surprises as kangaroo tail soup, coxcombs in jelly, shark fin soup, grouse pie, bright cheese known as Wensleydale, and a penumbra of darkly smoked meats.

Sentimentalists will wish the American version a cheerio. Its heavy and fruity fare offers a spice to an age of light vegetarianism. Still names and institutions hallowed by the red rust of time have little appeal for hurrying New Yorkers. They live in the eternal now.

Restaurants have long since found that to advertise a place as where General Grant or even the later O. Henry dined has no drawing power. But show that Lindbergh, Helen Morgan or Mayor Walker are patrons and the tables may fill in jig time.

On the Bowery the shave has slumped from 15 cents to a dime, and a hair-cut from a quarter to 20 cents. One shop in Chatham sq. is featuring a 10-cent manicure. But the frozen pride of the avenue salons has not melted. One place still charges $3 a manicure.

Among the Harlem slumming spots is The Clam Shop—an airless haven, where a masculinely dressed mulatto woman sings ribald songs to her own piano accompaniment. It is at its merriest around 4 a. m. But to me it was as foggy with melancholy as with smoke. Members of our party saw a white girl toss a note to a black fellow as she danced past and saw him bestow a sly, answering wink. And what heightened the shudder was that one of our party knew the girl.

On the way home we fell to discussing the greatest sudden surprises ever received. My own concerned a worshipped repertoire actress, upon whom I came flagrante delicto in a moonlit dell returning from a 'possum hunt. But I think the most hair-raising of all was that of a gentleman who awakened in the middle of the night at a house party to see the wife of his best friend go through his trousers pockets and extract the bill-fold. Then tip-toe back to her husband.

The late Will Hogg and I were prowling around the lower East Side Ghetto one Sunday morning as a prelude to a kosher breakfast in one of the Delancey st. delicatessens. He stopped to purchase a scoopful of parboiled sunflower seeds—a salted delicacy of the section—and spread them out on a table while waiting for our order. Among them was a folded piece of paper which he started to toss away, then opened it up. Printed across it was "Hello, Will—How's everything in Houston?" That was his home city. It was doubtless the legerdemain of some practical joker, but I spent the rest of the day nursing a fully developed set of the orks. He always thought it was a prank of mine. It wasn't.

One of the eerie stories persisting since the Dorothy Arnold disappearance concerns a new and strange white swan in the Central Park lake, a few feet from the spot on the shore where the Arnold girl was last seen. The swan was not there until the morning following her disappearance. The inference is that she suddenly turned, of all the sillies, into a swan.

I'm going to lay off writing spooky stuff like this after midnight. There's a funny noise in the book shelves right now—like somebody moaning. And if that isn't a big pillow dimly outlined in a chair in the next room, this will likely be the last column.

Just Folks

Choice

A dollar said to me:
"I think I'd rather be
The bright joy in a youngster's hand
Than one of millions three."

And once a red rose said,
Beside a sick child's bed:
"I'd rather glow alone than be Part blanket for the dead."

A doll said: "Let me be
A child's glad company
Than merely one of countless dolls
The fond eye may not see."

As for myself, I say:
"The friend I'd rather play
To one who truly needs a friend,
Along life's troubled way,

"Than be just one man more
To cross the threshold o'er
And with a crowd of cheering friends
March to some great man's door."

The Hand and the Man

The Thumb Tells What the Brain Has Been Doing

THE GORILLA WHOSE HAND IS SHOWN ABOVE TWO HANDS, TWO THUMBS

The lower picture in this column shows the gorilla to which that strangely-shaped hand belonged. The gorilla, dead, is seen with three white men, Mr. Raven, Dr. McGregor and Dr. Gregory, holding him up for the photographer.

The hand on the left is that of a man who has been thinking, at least in a primitive way. The hand on the right, infinitely more powerful, is that of a gorilla that has NOT done any thinking. The difference between thinking and NOT thinking is shown in THE THUMB of the two hands.

All that the gorilla requires of fingers and thumbs is that they provide him with a "hook" to hang around the branch of a tree, or to grasp a club in walking.

The little stump of a thumb on the gorilla's hand is satisfactory so far as he is concerned. While the gorilla has retained the low forehead that you see in this picture, the undeveloped, though powerful hand, and the microscopic thumb, his human so-called "cousins" have developed a bigger thumb, able to work with each of the four fingers.

That development is due to the fact that the owner of the human thumb is a THINKING being.

And as his thinking has increased, the necessity of a more highly developed thumb has increased. The thumb, its flexibility, capacity for work and usefulness, have all grown with the owner's mental processes.

Men first fastened sharp flints to the ends of sticks. They needed skill with the hand, and the thumb must work with the fingers for that.

They threw heavy, clumsy lances, and needed a long thumb to put on one side of the lance to counterbalance the four fingers on the other side.

They invented a bow and arrow, and needed a strong, flexible thumb to hold the arrow against the bowstring and pull it back with great force for shooting and killing.

Music and the innumerable instruments came, and a better thumb was needed for playing on those instruments.

All this scientists call "Evolution." They tell you that your ancestors of three million years ago had a forehead not much better than that of this gorilla, and an expression about as ugly.

They tell you that the thumb on your small hand, far bigger than that of any gorilla, with his huge paw, is the result of thought.

You do not have to believe that, but you will look at these pictures with interest, you will THINK about them, and, possibly, as you think, your thumb will grow. There is no doubt that thinking influences the size of the nose as a strong will influences the chin.
